Two Fine Trains
Big Wet-Dry Fight
All Skeletons Alike
France Thinks and Acts

—By Arthur Brisbane—

CHICAGO, April 14—This is written on the Pennsylvania Railroad's Broadway Limited from Chicago to New York.

Downtown Chicago is quiet and peaceful on Sunday. State st empty, the big office buildings vacant, waiting for Monday's rush.

Pulling out of Chicago, this Pennsylvania Broadway Limited and the New York Central's Advance Twentieth Century, roll side by side on parallel tracks.

Passengers and porters look through the windows, hoping for a race. But the American engineers are too wise for that. Each is convinced that he could outrace the other, and looks "foul scorn" at his fellow member of the Brotherhood.

Soon the giant locomotives separate, the Twentieth Century traveling along the lakes to Cleveland and Buffalo, the Broadway Limited running through Fort Wayne, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia. Traveling nearly a thousand miles by paths far separated, they arrive in New York at the same hour. No other country in the world can show such trains, or anything to compare with them.

Chicago and all Illinois are deeply interested already in the coming senatorial fight between Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, Republican bone-dry, and James Hamilton Lewis, Democrat dripping wet. Mrs. McCormick, having beaten Deneen, will get the heavy Republican and prohibition vote in Southern Illinois. What Chicago will do remains to be seen.

Chicagoans are not anxious to drink. But Chicago, tired of gunmen, racketeering, hijacking, attributes their activities to bootlegging and attributes bootlegging to prohibition.

Queen Victoria of Sweden, a kindly woman, is buried in the royal family vault with former kings and queens. Moving ceremony, many of the people gather and weep politely. But once dead, they become skeletons much alike, whether it be the incomparable fighter, Charles The 12th, superb Gustavus Adolphus, or a royal descendant of the French lawyer, Bernadotte, whose son was made marshal by Napoleon, and King of Sweden by ingenious intrigue.

The French people think logically, act promptly. That has kept them a great nation since the days of Pepin the Short and his son, Charlemagne.

The French did not like the actions of Chinese communists on the border of Tongking, which belongs to France.

France sent no protest to Russia about communism, but sent troops and flying machines to the border, killed 500 of the Chinese, surrounded, bombarded and captured the communists' town of Longchow.

Next the French captured five Russians accused of aiding the rebels, stood them up against the wall with many Chinese communists and shot them all to death with machine guns.

Pacifism is all right sentimentally, but it doesn't interest the French when there is real work to be done.

Our kind hearted United States Senator Lynn J. Frazier, of North Dakota, says war isn't necessary at all. He wants the United States to prove its sincerity and put an end to all war by abolishing our army and navy, and writing into the Constitution a clause that would make "war for any purpose illegal."

That would amuse the French. It would also amuse some Americans who remember that not long ago an amendment to the Constitution made all alcohol above one-half of one per cent illegal.

In Berlin, a cocktail-making competition is won by a moving picture star, Lillian Harvey. Her prescription is one-third lemon juice, one-third gin, one-third cointreau.

Second prize is won by a mixture of port wine, brandy and cordial medoc. Everything mentioned except the lemon juice is a poison.

This country did no favor to Europe when it sent our foolish money spenders over to make popular the cocktail, most harmful of all alcoholic concoctions.

The foreign naval parley decided that the United States shall junk the battleships Utah and Florida.

It doesn't matter much, since battleships are out of date; nothing but targets for airplane bombs.

But it seems a little strange for the United States to be told in London, which of its battleships to junk.

What ships, in your opinion, will the British or the Japanese now sink? Nothing worth keeping you may be sure.

Fuller Demands Probe of Innes' Bank Books

REVEALS SOUTH END VICE

EX-GOVERNOR IN ATTACK ON INNES

Wants an Inquiry Made of His Bankbooks and Taxi Connections

The bank accounts of Charles H. Innes, Boston attorney and Suffolk County Republican leader, should be examined by Atty.-Gen. Warner in the Garrett inquiry, former Governor Alvan T. Fuller declared today.

Verbally lacerating Innes and former Dist. Atty. Thomas C. O'Brien, the former Governor, candidate for United States senator, flung an unmistakable challenge to Innes' leadership of the Republican machine in Boston.

"Charlie Innes' connection with taxicab companies should be looked into and his bank accounts should be examined by the attorney-general during his present probe," declared Fuller, arriving home from a visit with friends in Michigan.

Although he did not directly say so he intimated that he had cut short his visit in order to be in Boston for the Garrett hearings, perhaps to take the stand.

"I'm right back home here now. Will you tell the attorney-general that for me?" he asked a Boston American reporter.

He was accompanied by Mrs. Fuller when he stepped off a train at the Huntington ave. station this morning. He was in a fighting mood over O'Brien's charges that he failed to act to clear up Boston police conditions and he accused O'Brien of being Innes' candidate in the coming senatorial election.

HOPES O'BRIEN RUNS

"I hope O'Brien will be my political opponent in the fight for Senator," he declared with a tight-lipped smile of anticipation.

"I believe when the election returns come in he will be about seventh, as he was in the campaign for mayor, when he was Charlie Innes' candidate, as I believe he is now.

"Why doesn't the attorney-general ask O'Brien why he did not, as district attorney, call a grand jury and indict the police commissioner?"

There was a little pause and the former Governor smiled again.

"Incidentally, Charlie Innes' connection with the taxicab com-

SEVENTH BABY IS SLASHED

The number of Newton "baby slasher" victims was increased to seven by a new name today when Mrs. Howard S. Parker of 123 Mt. Vernon st., Newtonville, reported that her son, Bruce, two, had been wounded.

She said the baby was scratched in three places on his right cheek while he was in his carriage in front of a store in Walnut st., Newtonville, where the mother was making purchases.

Sergt. Mahoney of Newton said today he had received information from the parents of a nine-year-old Newton girl that on Saturday night she saw a man bending over a baby carriage.

The man, according to the girl, wore dark overcoat and soft hat, had a black turned-up mustache and carried a small black bag.

Police say the latest developments point to a middle-aged woman who was seen near the carriage of the nine-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Huey, Winchester st., Newtonville, just prior to the discovery of an attack on their baby.

It is also believed that finger nails are used, since the wounds on all victims are of a character that might be made in that manner. The public are urged to report at once any persons acting suspiciously near carriages containing babies.

Warfield has been there three weeks and underwent a "rather serious" operation, Dr. John Stewart said.

It had been rumored there were three operations and that the actor's condition was critical.

Relatives in San Francisco early today said they had received a telegram summoning them, but Dr. Stewart said he knew nothing about such a message and other hospital authorities said no reason was apparent for it and that Mr Warfield was "out of danger."

WILSON DEAF TO PLEA FOR CLEAN UP, IS CLAIM

Only Reinstein Murder Brought Relief, Says Witness

The worst vice conditions describable existed in the South End for more than four years of Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson's regime despite specific complaints made to him by welfare organizations as early as July, 1925, it was revealed at the Garrett hearing this afternoon.

Lincoln House Association executive complained to Wilson and personally interview him regarding the South End vice traffic, but for four years afterward conditions continued open and out of control, according to the testimony of another "surprise witness."

B. Preston Clark, connected with the South End welfare house for 14 years and active in the stand as the public hearings of the attorney-general's investigation of Oliver H. Garrett, mentioned police raider, resumed at 2 p. m.

He told of conditions in Compton, Dover, Emerald and Village sts., of complaints to police captains and finally to Commissioner Wilson himself.

UNLAWFUL RAID

"There was no improvement until the crusade started after the Federal authorities stepped in as a result of the murder of Sammy Reinstein," he said.

Shortly after the hearing opened it was revealed in evidence that the 11 cases of liquor seized by Garrett's squad from the Wellington Garage, Harvard ave., Dorchester, in 1925, were taken at a time when the raiders had no warrants for either search or seizure.

This is the liquor of which there is no record of forfeiture.

Another highlight of the afternoon was the testimony of Mrs. Enrico Salerno of Maverick st., East Boston, from whose home a valuable diamond ring and a large sum of money disappeared on the same day Garrett and five others of his squad searched it.

"The children had a dime bank with 32 in it. They had saved it to buy clothes and shoes. That was gone," she said, telling of her return to the house after the police raiders had arrested her husband on a charge of keeping and exposing liquor.

PEST HOLE THERE

Clark was recalled to the stand at his own request and said he wished to make a statement for a group of workingmen who live near the Lincoln House.

"We have self-respecting families. The children are fine material for citizenship; they are a great group of fine youngsters. I wish to draw the contrast.

"I wish to show that these families are obliged to bring up their children near this pest hole."

Clark told of correspondence between himself and Grace B. Willis, head of the Lincoln House, and the police commissioner regarding con-

START DRIVE TO EASE TAXES

Leaders in civic and merchantile circles in Boston have expressed unqualified support of the campaign launched by the Boston Evening American to eliminate or lighten the present heavy state income tax burden borne by small salaried earners.

Numbered among these is Representative William M. McDermott, former tax collector for the city of Boston, who asserts he is "strenuously opposed to any further slipping into the pockets of low wage earners."

Ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald also an ardent proponent of the Boston Evening American campaign, declared the methods and procedure of levying the state tax have been "wholly indefensible."

McMorrow, at the outset of his remarks, declared the state income tax to be a misnomer, as all the state does is to collect the "windfall" from the federal government.

ditions in Compton, Emerald, Dover and Village ave., and at a conference they had with Wilson as a result of the letter.

Wilson assured them, Clark said, he would take the matter up with Capt. George W. Patterson of the vice squad and see that the conditions were remedied.

RELIEF WITH MURDER

On Aug. 3, the police commissioner set Capt. Patterson's report which was, in substance, that a number of policemen had been stationed in front of the houses in Compton st. and that the occupants of the houses were married.

"After the exchange of all this correspondence did conditions improve?" Hall asked.

"They did not," said Clark.

"They were open and flagrant as before?"

"Yes. There was no relief until after the Reinstein murder, when the federal authorities stepped in."

He said conditions had been desirable for 10 years in the vicinity of the Lincoln House, despite appeals to police captains and Commissioner Wilson.

Frederick E. Simmons, assistant clerk of the Municipal court, submitted the evidence regarding the Wellington Garage raid.

DRANK THE RUM

Saterno told of the raid and how, en route to police headquarters [illegible] of Garrett's, raiding squad [illegible] rum.

He was away from the house about an hour and found everything in disorder upon his return. His wife corroborated his story in greater detail.

Crowley's Bank Account Found Perfectly OK.

N. Cary Hayward, public accountant, who examined the bank accounts of Supt. Michael H. Crowley and his wife, found nothing suspicious about them, he testified today at the Garrett inquiry.

They were "perfectly straight," he said, and the entries were entirely consistent with Supt. Crowley's salary. His testimony was tantamount to an exoneration of Crowley from any suspicion of graft.

panies should be looked into and his bank accounts should be examined."

He laughingly refused to elaborate upon his statement regarding the Boston attorney and politician.

He did not say whether he would ask Warner to allow him to take the stand at the Garrett hearing, but his request to the reporter to "tell the attorney-general that for me" was an indication that he would not.

NOT FIRST DEFI

If he does not appear voluntarily without an invitation, he will not be a witness, Warner has declared. His friends point out that he has undoubtedly returned to Boston to get first-hand information regarding the present situation and that he will probably not make any decision for two or three days regarding his possible appearance at the Garrett hearings.

Should O'Brien take the stand, he is certain to follow, they state.

Today's is not the first occasion the ex-Governor has tossed the gauntlet at Innes' leadership of the Republican machine hereabouts, but it is the first time Innes' name has been publicly brought into the Garrett case.

Innes and Fuller have not been friendly for years and today's statement by the former chief executive of Massachusetts was further indication Fuller will court no favors from the Republican machine when he makes his battle at the polls in the autumn.

There still persist rumors, to the effect that he will make his fight for the senatorship on the Democratic ticket or as an independent, shedding his Republican cloak with which, he has made no secret, he has long been dissatisfied.

When the attorney-general was appraised of Fuller's statement he said:

"I have no present intention of summoning Mr. Fuller, but I will welcome every assistance he may lend in this investigation. I am sure he is desirous of assisting in every way possible.

"Nothing is being heard in this investigation but those things related to Garrett, Garrett's pensioning and services, as stated in the resolve.

"If anybody can show anything pertinent to these matters, it would, of course, be admissible."

RAID 'SALON' OF STAGE BEAUTY OF GAY 90'S

Belle Livingstone Deceived by U. S. Agent Who Sang Touching Ballads

New York, April 14 (AP)—Belle Livingstone, whose statuesque beauty made her famous as a chorus girl in the pink tights of the 90's, was free under bail today after a federal prohibition agent had sung his way into her exclusive Park ave. "Salon."

Miss Livingstone, whose husbands have included a count and a couple of millionaires, returned from Europe two years ago and opened a "salon of culture, wit and bonhommie."

After 10 hours in a police station cell, Miss Livingstone described the raid which occurred early yesterday.

"No more tenors," she declared evenly, "and some of my best friends are tenors."

DUCHED BY BALLADS

The individual who inspired her distrust in high "C" artists was a prohibition agent who had ingratiated himself into her confidence, singing "Mother Machree," and other ballads. He had been there Thursday and returned with five others yesterday.

"The raid was a scream," she said. "The most important nobleman now in America and the cream of New York's debutantes were sitting around when I saw six men enter.

"One started wrenching at the cupboard door. I called John Gillis, our old regime bartender, and said, 'John, don't let those gentlemen wrench at that door. Get them the keys at once.'

LENTY OF LIQUOR

"They found a great deal of liquor in the cupboard.

"But I must say they conducted themselves with a very gracious Jesse James courtesy throughout. One said to me, 'Tex Guinan wisecracks kind of bitter, but you're a regular grand dame.'"

Miss Livingstone and three men described as bartenders were arrested.

She denied liquor was sold in her 'salon,' saying it was conducted on a "Dutch treat" basis, that the guests only chipped in to help defray the cost of refreshments.

Congressman F. H. LaGuardia of New York is studying the Garrett case and will use it as a notorious example of "The Failure of Prohibition and the Breakdown of Enforcement," subject of an address he will give April 27 at Symphony Hall.

The Liberal Civic League, Inc., will sponsor LaGuardia's appearance, it was announced today. The Congressman is also expected to refer to his controversy with Mrs. Lucy S. Peabody, Massachusetts woman club leader, during the recent congressional hearing on prohibition.

Extracts from testimony at the Garrett hearings have been sent him, together with what he terms the "apology" of dry leaders with respect to it.

PARLEY'S ALL OVER BUT THE SIGNING

"Big Five" Will Put Names on the Dotted Line Today; Then U. S. Envoys Sail

London, April 14 (AP)—One week from tomorrow, barring mishaps, representatives of the five great naval powers will affix their signatures to the historic pact which has evolved from the London naval conference after long weeks of difficult negotiations.

Announcement to this effect was made at a 24-minute plenary session of the conference in Queen Anne's drawing room in old St. James' Palace at noon.

Prime Minister MacDonald, chairman of the conference, made the announcement.

It was the principal development in the whirlwind session, the first complete meeting of the conference since February 11. It originally was planned to try to get the treaty drawn up so that it could be signed Thursday, but he announced this was impossible.

ALL FIVE TO SIGN.

As it is, it will be a race against time for the drafters to get the document ready for the meeting Tuesday, so that the Americans may catch the Leviathan immediately afterward for New York and home.

The treaty to be signed will 'be a three-power agreement between Japan, America and Great Britain covering limitation and reduction of naval craft, and agreement between the five powers, France and Italy included, on such points as humanization of submarines and capital ship holiday.

Important French-Italian limitation differences are left unsettled subject to subsequent negotiations.

There will be a clause allowing any of three powers signing the limitations section to depart from its terms if the building of a non-signatory nation endangers it.

U. S. WINS A POINT.

Today's 24-minute plenary session was merely for the purpose of getting final formal approval of committee reports, which constitute the "raw" material for the treaty itself.

There was one interesting break. When the prime minister asked Secretary Stimson to announce an element of further agreement between him and Reijiro Wakatsuki, head of the Japanese delegation, Secretary Stimson arose and said that he and the Japanese had agreed that exchanges might be made between the light cruiser and destroyer category not to exceed 10 per cent of the category to which the change is made.

The Japanese had asked for a 15 per cent differential.

The American naval delegates today tentatively notified the United States lines that they would be ready to sail for home on the Leviathan by 6 a. m., April 23.

The liner is due to sail about noon, April 22, but it was indicated she would be held 24 hours for the naval delegation.

Capper is for Naval Pact, He Announces

Washington, April 14 (AP)—Endorsement of the agreement reached at the London naval conference was given today by Senator Capper, Republican, Kansas, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, which will be called upon to pass judgment on the pact.

No Comeback for Trotzky, Says Soviet

Moscow, April 14—Leon Trotzky has no chance of coming back into the political picture of Soviet Russia.

This statement was made flatly by Emilian Yaroslavsky, secretary of the Central Control Commission of the Communist party, ranking disciplinarian body, which voted to throw the old opposition leader out. He said:

Leon Trotzky.

"Trotzky has always hoped the party would be forced to call on him for help. He told the capitalistic world about expecting to be called to 'save the situation.'

"But, alas, days, weeks and months have passed. The party is not going to call to the exiled Trotzky for help. In fact, the party is forgetting about him altogether."

Mrs. Hamilton Sees U. S. Women as Marvels

London, April 14—The most astounding thing about American life is the place taken by women, according to Mrs. Mary Agnes Hamilton, Labor M. P., who has just returned from a trip to the United States.

Mrs. Hamilton

"With a naivete which is, as a rule, perfectly amiable, American women regard themselves as the finer half of creation, and consider it to be not so much the duty, but the privilege of the masculine order to supine them.

"This consciousness permeates their being. It gives the American woman her poise; it gives her the conviction of being good-looking, which is not always supportable by facts; it gives her a sense of being irresistibly intelligent.

The "financial wizard" asked for a commutation of sentence in order that he might see his mother before she died, but his petition has been denied, it was revealed today.

Ponzi was sentenced on Feb. 15, 1927, to from seven to nine years at Charlestown prison as a common thief after having completed five years in Federal prison at Plymouth.

NATION'S PRESS SEES DEFEAT OF LEAGUE COURT IN ILLINOIS VOTE

EDITORS EXPRESS WISHES OF PEOPLE TO 'REMAIN FREE'

(By Universal Service)

Washington, April 14—That the citizens of America are determined not to become involved in the messes of European intrigue through membership in the League Court, is emphasized by the results in Illinois last Tuesday, when Ruth Hanna McCormick defeated Senator Charles Deneen by more than 200,000 plurality for the Republican senatorial nomination.

This is the view set forth in editorials from newspapers in widely scattered sections of the country commenting on the Illinois result. Excerpts from some of the more significant editorials are as follows:

N. Y. Herald-Tribune

"The dramatic and decisive defeat of United States Senator Deneen for renomination by Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick in Illinois bears a vital relation to two important national issues—the World Court and Prohibition.

"The outstanding primary issue was the World Court. Mrs. McCormick is an implacable opponent of our participation. Senator Deneen defended his record of approval. The Illinois verdict will give strength to its opponents in the Senate, and may make more difficult ratification of other parts for co-operation with foreign nations."

Benton Harbor (Mich.) News-Palladium

"The World Court is nothing but a League of Nations Court. It is created by the league for the purpose of dealing with the league's judicial matters. We voted in 1920 to keep out of the league. In 1930 we're still voting to keep out of the league entanglements and away from league connections. Perhaps if we keep voting long enough and often enough against league involvements, Washington leadership some day will understand that we want to mind our own business and attend strictly to our own affairs."

Lansing State Journal

"The United States is more likely to remain out of the World Court because of the victory of Mrs. McCormick in the Illinois primary than because anything has happened in a long while."

Chicago Tribune

"Mrs. McCormick had put the League Court issue in the foreground of her appeal and made it the chief subject of her very able discussion of public questions.

"We believe Mrs. McCormick could have swept the nation as well as Illinois upon that issue, for it reaches the profound instinct and deepest conviction of the American people.

"Deep in the consciousness of the American people is the will to be free from the tentacles of European politics. Our forefathers of each generation cherished that determination and have refused to be deceived by any plausible disguise for our entanglement. Mrs. McCormick voiced our ancient, our undying will to be free. She made herself champion of the political independence of the United States in world politics, and she has received an indorsement from her fellow citizens which will not be mistaken wherever there is political intelligence in the world."

Washington Post

"Ruth Hanna McCormick's sweeping victory over Charles S. Deneen in the Illinois senatorial primary is sufficient to send a chill along the spine of every Republican senator who supports the so-called World Court. McKinley was defeated for renomination because he had committed himself to the World Court and now Senator Deneen is beaten for the same reason. In Illinois any candidate for the United States Senate signs his death warrant when he favors the adhesion of the United States to the so-call-d World Court.

"There is reason to believe that the Republicans of other states are equally determined to defeat senators who support the court."

Tacoma Leader

"Those who have been keeping their fingers on the public pulse are finding great significance in the result of the Republican primary election in Illinois. * * * The only issue raised in the fierce campaign was that of the League and World Court. It is significant that pronounced League of World Court Senators who have come up for re-election have generally been retired to private life."

Cleveland Plain-Dealer

"Mrs. McCormick based her appeal almost exclusively on the World Court issue. If elected in November she will furnish one enthusiastic vote against Mr. Hoover's proposal that America be voted into the court under the Root formula."

Cincinnati Enquirer

"Mrs. McCormick, so to speak, hazarded her political fortunes on one card—she opposed entry by the United States into the World Court, declaring that if elected she would vote against such entry.

"She forced Senator Deneen, an advocate of the Court, to meet the issue.

"The campaign thus once more indicated with emphasis that American citizenship is not ready to have commerce with the League of Nations, directly or indirectly—a fact which some American pacifists and internationalists appear slow to realize."

New York Times

"The first claim, made by the victrix herself, is hard to refute: That Illinois Republicans are cool to the World Court proposal."

Philadelphia Public Ledger

"Nominally, the issues in this senatorial primary contest were the World Court and the League of Nations. Mrs. McCormick is against the United States entering either. Senator Deneen, who had not hitherto exhibited much enthusiasm for this issue, defended his vote for the World Court."

TITANIC SUNK 18 YEARS AGO

New York, April 14 (INS)—Eighteen years ago today the giant liner Titanic, on her maiden transatlantic voyage, crashed into an iceberg off Newfoundland.

Less than three hours later she sank, with the loss of 1517 lives, the greatest maritime disaster of all times.

It was a few minutes before midnight, on April 14, 1912, and the sea was calm. The band was playing and the 2340 passengers and crew were in a festive mood, for the newly-christened sea racer had registered 549 miles for its third day's run, a record.

There were few who saw the sky-scraper of ice which loomed in the way. A quick twist to port of the vessel's wheel saved a headon collision. It was a submerged ridge of the iceberg which ripped open the hull of the steamer like a razor.

The first world-famous radio S O S was sent forth. It read:

"We have struck an iceberg. Badly damaged. Rush aid."

Then the Titanic listed and sank.

50 Cents Invested in Charity Brings Woman $30,000

Recently from Dallas, Tex., came a letter to Mrs. Newton informing her that with two others, she shares the $30,000 estate of the man befriended in 1914.

MOVE TO EASE TAX BURDEN

fair" and distribute it among the cities and towns. He felt that a change in the name of the tax, probably to "City and Town Income Tax," would help the situation.

The former tax collector, who has served several years as a member of the special commission which studied the taxation laws, will lead the fight in the legislature for these relief measures for the fellow earning less than $10,000.

A reduction in the present tax rate of 1½ per cent to 1 per cent.

Retension of the present $2000 exemption for single men. Against lowering the exemption to $1500 as recommended by a majority of the commission.

Increasing the exemption from $2500 to $3500 of a married person living with wife or husband.

Increasing from $250 to $400 the amount of exemption for each child under twenty-one years of age, instead of eighteen years as now. The same exemption to apply for a parent entirely dependent on the taxpayer for support or for a person incapable of self support or mentally or physically defective.

The attempt that is being made to include the smaller salaried single men in the income tax group through the lowering of the exemption allowance was particularly assailed by McMorrow.

"I am irreverably opposed to any further dipping into the pockets of low wage earners, who in the last analysis are paying plenty now indirectly for the cost of government," he said. "The federal government has made several reductions in the income tax rate and the state should have followed suit long before this."

He pointed out that historically, only the excess of $2000 of a person's income has been taxed since 1873, at which time, he said, the value of a dollar was considerably greater than it is today.

Former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald said:

"I might say that, for sometime, the methods and procedure of the State tax have been wholly indefensible. There is neither reason nor common sense behind the administration of the State income tax in Massachusetts. I hope some day to be able to go before the people of the State on this issue. I heartily congratulate the Boston Evening American on its taking up this fight."

BRITAIN FACES BIG TAX JUMP

London, April 14 (AP)—Before a tensely interested house, Philip Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer, today placed the second Laborite budget in British history involving new taxation in order to balance the budget.

The chancellor estimated the revenue for 1930-31 on the new taxation at about $3,947,225,000, with expenditures about $3,659,045,000.

The chancellor said new taxation was unavoidable because receipts under the existing laws would show a deficit of $210,000,000 against the estimated expenditures.

Discussing income tax increases, he declared that three-quarters of the income taxpayers would not be affected by the net changes.

JUDGE DEFIES GANGSTERS IN JAIL PLOT

Providence Judge Has Gangsters Held for Trial Without Bail After Plot Fails

Providence, April 14 (AP)—An attempted jail delivery from the cell room in Superior court was brought to light today when Judge Antonio A. Capotosto, sitting on the criminal bench, hurled defiance at the underworld after receipt of threatening letters in an attempt to intimidate him from giving out severe sentences is now under investigation by the attorney-general's office.

Four of nine men who were in the cell awaiting arraignment were brought before the judge today and remanded to jail without bail awaiting completion of the investigation. It was disclosed today that the men in the cell room had ripped away sections of the concrete wall, torn piping and tin sheeting from the side of their cell and had succeeded in ripping a hole in the exterior wall of the building.

A plumber, called to repair the piping the following day, found a heavy blackjack and a screw driver fashioned from a prison knife.

Addressing one of the defendants who was in the cell a week ago, for arraignment today before him, Judge Capotosto declared:

"Sending threatening letters to this court or to his family is no deterrent whatsoever," and added that in view of the threats made the court would extend his term on the criminal bench to two years, in the face of the threats." A judge in Superior Court usually presides on the criminal bench one year before being relieved.

Model From Chandler & Co.

DELICATE colorings and soft dressmaking effects seem already to have done their utmost in the cause of feminine fashions. But if you think the pinnacle of "prettiness" has been reached just remember that summer is yet to come.

Those fashions that have been most scorned during the past three summers will be most feted as the picture type of girl is crowned queen of July and August.

Organdy in the bouffant stylings which it interprets so well will be present at summer dances in company with just as crisp little capes of taffeta. And where organdy is in the day time, dainty frocks of dotted swiss, flowered lawn and dimity will also be.

There is even rumor of wide brimmed floppy hats to accent lovely quaint effects lace mitts and berruffled parasols!

THE organdie frock pictured is from a model by that master of youthful simplicity, Chanel, and is as quaintly styled as the photos of ladies in old daguerreotypes. Scattered bouquets of varicolored posies are embroidered over its sheer whiteness. Its long peplum tier is echoed by a deep under ruffle, both bound in yellow taffeta ribbon which also edges the small revers facing the V neckline.

A huge bow of yellow taffeta ribbon is posed at the back. Have you wondered whether sashes would be revived along with other styles reminiscent of the pages of Little Women? The younger set has discovered that sashes are exactly right for the demure evening frock of organdy. They mark the high waistline and top voluminous long skirts. The bodices which are slender and fitted are topped by simple round or shallow V necklines, and may have little cap or puff sleeves or no sleeves at all.

The young modern adopting these revised quaint styles must acquire the demure ways of another day.

TWIN pearls adorn each of a pair of suede gloves to be worn with the new short-sleeved frocks. Though the gloves are of eight-button length, the two little round pearl buttons at the side of each are efficient enough to do the work of eight and charming enough for eight ordinary buttons.

The popular clip with bracelet to match makes up a smart pair that will be seen everywhere together this season. As a matter of ensembling they can be made to point up a costume with appropriate color, for they are to be found in many shades. The beads are set in sterling silver that is antique in finish. Just another pair to join the flock of pearl "sister" fashions such as the pair of bracelets to match, one to be worn on either wrist; the pair of clips; the beret and scarf; the bag and shoe—the list is endless.

STONE LEADS PEOPLE'S

Thompson Stone, conductor of the Handel and Haydn Society, as well as of other choral organizations in this vicinity, made his debut as an orchestral conductor in a guest leadership of the People's Symphony Orchestra, yesterday afternoon.

The orchestral numbers were Mottl's Ballet Suite of Rameau's music, a Symphony in D by Haydn, a Wagnerian excerpt, "Morning Dawn and Siegfriend's Rhine Journey," and Goldmark's Overture, "Sakuntala."

The program was not without a tinge of choral music, for a group of singers from the Handel and Haydn joined the instrumental forces in a performance of Gounod's "Gallia." This piece was given an excellent performance, the chorus being a pliant and resonant instrument in Mr. Stone's hands. Marion Kingsbury's voice was rather small for the solo part.

It was the purely orchestral music, however, that surprised the writer. For one thing, Mr. Stone has been none too fortunate in handling the orchestra as accompaniment for the numerous choral works he has undertaken here lately. For another, the People's orchestra has had an off year, giving concerts irregularly and, no doubt, lacking regular rehearsals.

Under the circumstances Mr. Stone accomplished something of a miracle, for the orchestra has never sounded better to our ears. It has been more accurate, surer of itself, let us say under the constant attention of Theophil Wendt. But we recall no such sonority as it mustered in the Wagner and Goldmark numbers.

THIS is the first Dover st. bridge to South Boston. Looking across what was known as the Cove the State House may be seen with shipping on the left. Six church spires may be counted in the city. At the right of the picture the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad now runs out to the Old Colony. The Boston & Albany and the New Haven now passes along the waterfront in the background proceeding west.

Letters of Final Winners in Forum on Prohibition

STATE GUARDIANSHIP WORKER SEES DRY LAW EVILS

Springfield, April 14—"Prohibition has always been my pet aversion and that is the reason why I decided to express my views in the Boston Evening American's forum," said John F. Fero, Jr., 109 Woodlawn st., winner of the final $100 prize for the best letter on repeal.

"My duties as visitor and investigator for state aid and relief and child guardianship of the Massachusetts Department of Public Welfare have brought me in contact with wretched conditions that are directly attributed to prohibition.

"I feel that forums such as this one will have an excellent influence on the public and will bring forth the good and bad features of prohibition."

Mr. Fero, who has been connected with the Massachusetts Department of Public Welfare since February, 1921, is an author of two juvenile books and a number of other books on welfare work. He has also contributed extensively to welfare publications.

A native of Fitchburg, he went to Springfield in his early youth and was graduated from Central high school in 1905, from Brown Academy in 1905 and from Syracuse University in 1909. For two years he studied medicine in the Baltimore Medical School.

Last Prize Views

The Boston Evening American tomorrow will publish the final prize letters in its forum on Prohibition. Thousands and thousands of letters have been received, and the judges have had great difficulty in reaching a decision as to winners.

It was planned to publish the final view today, but there remain prize-winners on Prohibition.

The Boston Evening American wishes to extend its heartfelt thanks to the judges for their wise, impartial service, and to the countless people who accepted this opportunity to express their views. It regrets its total inability to publish the entire mass of letters.

By G. V. CONDON
101 Norwell st., Dorchester
Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

I favor modification. As I have been a school teacher, lumberman, ice man, baseball and basketball player, I came in touch with people young and old, also every religion in America. I saw a wonderful boy go on his way toward a drunkard's grave just by defying this law while so many are trying to fool others into how much good it has done. I pleaded with boys who were on my basketball team to abstain from this horrible moonshine. They only said, Well all the other boys do it. Now my dear friends, like Lincoln, I will do anything, so help me God, to protect the younger generation from alcoholism. No man ever worked with much rougher people than I have. I am just a common laborer now and have seen more liquor drunk than all the ministers in Boston put togelher since the Volstead Act was passed.

Any man who honestly makes the statement, that the Eighteenth Amendment has reduced drunkenness, and caused better living conditions, all I can say I wish he had to work in the places where I have since 1919 and he would soon change his mind if he were honest with himself.

By MRS. EDWARD SWEENEY
2 Walnut ct., Roxbury
Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

I favor repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment because man is still in the drinking and upon his own shoulders rests the moral responsibility of making or breaking himself. He is not a "fallen angel" that has seen better days, but a fighting animal that has learned to walk erect and battle for the things he wants—food, drink, money and a mate.

The Eighteenth Amendment stands, or rather totters, between him and his favorite drinks, but by battle, bribes, bootlegging and murder he manages to get his drink. So why not let him have it legally. The wrong use of it will kill him or cure him of the habit; the right use of it will not hurt him.

The money spent in keeping the "sniffers" sniffing could, I think, be spent to better advantage by striving to teach men the close relation between cause and effect. If a soft brain and a hard liver is part of the price paid for heavy drinking, then self-preservation, rather than the Eighteenth Amendment, will make men temperate.

By CHAS. R. WHITEHOUSE
32 Washburn Ave., Cambridge
Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

I am a hater of liquors in any form, but I certainly do not approve of a prohibition that does not prohibit. The present and the direct cause of all these investigations of the police departments, that are costing the taxpayers so much to conduct, it is allowing illiterate, non-citizens to become wealthy and is putting temptation in the hands of underpaid public officials to accept graft.

I wish to qualify the underpaid statement in this way: their pay does not come within one hundred times the amount that can be made by playing in with the bootleggers; and we all know that it is impossible to gather together a force of men for this work and have them all upright. What does bootleg poison liquor do to the drinker, it may kill him, some say the sooner the better; that may be all right, but what of those that it makes sick, to whom are they turning for a remedy for their sickness, the doctor, no; nine times out of ten they are turning to the lowest form of animal life on the earth for their relief, the dope pedlar.

This can be proven right here in Boston any time at all, and if we are not careful we will have the worst problem of all on our hands, that of increased numbers of dope users. Let us have some sort of change, see if there is not a prohibition that prohibits or try the plan now in use in Canada, they do not have the troubles that we are having.

Store Clerks, Attention

WANT TO LOOK YOUNG!

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels — there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples — a bilious look in your face — dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound as a substitute for calomel to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They help bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c, 30c, 60c.

By JOHN F. FERO, JR.
108 Woodland St., Springfield
Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

May I submit my reasons for desiring repeal of prohibition?

Oftentimes an obnoxious law, by common consent, becomes a dead letter, and its enforcement is not even publicly advocated.

Preservation of liberty and control of public morals by means of a general permission to ignore law does not point to a wholesome social condition.

The greatest obstacle encountered by the prohibition law is not the active hostility of bad men to such a law, but the unreadiness of good men to support it.

Prohibition has not furthered temperance as more people drink today who never tasted liquor before prohibition.

The law has destroyed respect for other laws and crime is as common as the liquor that causes it.

Before prohibition I believed in it, but as a social worker, I have seen the corroding effect on the public mind that is dominated in its relations to government by the consideration whether the law shall be honored.

I have seen the law defied, a whole generation of habitual law breakers schooled in evasion and shamelessness; courts become ineffective through fluctuations of policy, delays, perjuries and other miscarriages of justice. Officers who have sworn to enforce the law have been double-faced and mercenary; legislators have been timid and insincere, while candidates for office have been hypocritical and truckling.

By MRS. WM. H. PORTER
Rockland st., North Easton
Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

I am in favor of the strictest enforcement of the prohibition law for 12 personal reasons.

I do not want my grandchildren brought up under conditions such as I witnessed as a child. I am the mother of 12 children, four boys and eight girls, all of whom are living. Of that number three are married. There are, so far, seven grandchildren.

Whoever gives intelligent consideration to this great problem must know that safety first cannot become a certainty while booze-ruled brains direct the hands that hold the steering wheel of a car.

What a terrible thing it would be to come to the day when you hold your darling baby in your arms, dying, stricken down by a drunken driver, and, looking into the glazing eyes of the little sufferer, know that you had helped to render the laws powerless to keep liquor away from the none too brilliant fellow whose rum-clogged brain had failed to function properly.

To vote to bring back legally the most terrible serpent that ever stung an unthinking, plague-ridden creation, to make mothers worse deliberately, would be worse than treason.

There is no limit to the dreadful things that unchecked liquor drinking will do. Why invite such calamity?

God never meant drunken men to menace the safety of children or their own souls. You cannot love your neighbor and vote for liquor, too. Be true to the best interests of life, have courage to stand for the right, which is not spelled rum.

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

I am a freshman at high school. These are my humble views on the prohibition question, as I have seen and heard in my experiences:

This generation is air-minded. Safety in the air needs clearheadedness. Clearheadedness and liquor are mortal enemies. Any law which can rule out intoxicants ought to be a friend to aviation. Therefore, I strongly favor the Eighteenth Amendment.

Furthermore, my mother tells of the times when it was considered unsafe to go out alone on Saturday nights. And my father recalls the street brawls he saw, which were due mostly to strong drinks. These scenes are becoming rarer, in my observation. I hope to live to see the day when they will be gone forever.

By MISS M. M. HANEY
113 Union st., Randolph
Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

The Eighteenth Amendment should be repealed, because it has no rightful place in the Constitution of the United States. It would be just as sensible to have an amendment to the Constitution forbidding the manufacture, transportation and sale of any other commodity the excessive use or display of which, on the individual, would cause various conditions.

Temperance or intemperance—the good effects of the one and the bad effects of the other, are equal things. It is for the individual to decide whether or not he shall be temperate.

If he decides to be intemperate to the point where he offends society, he can be adequately punished by the police power of his community.

The Eighteenth Amendment is illogical. Each town or city can always vote "Yes" or "No" as to license.

The saloon can be always well policed, and is no more demoralizing than are the night clubs. The "speak easy" would be eliminated by the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment—so would much murder and robbery.

By BARNARD SMITH

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

It is in the interest of justice that the writer favors the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor. The work of the world will be done and its burdens be borne without undue strain upon anyone if each member of society shall do his or her share of the work and bear his or her share of the burdens according to his or her strength and ability; but to do this each member must keep at maximum efficiency. The drinking of alcoholic liquor, even in small amounts, reduces efficiency. As evidence for the proof of this statement may the writer quote a small fraction of a report made in 1924 by a committee of the British Medical Research Council entitled "Alcohol—Its Action on the Human Organism." This report says:

"For acts requiring skill the interference from experiments seems to be that their performance tends to be temporarily impaired after a dose of alcohol. Similarly the evidence points to the depression by alcohol of what does in which it affects them at all, of mental processes, if they involve in any degree the higher mental faculties."

When one part of the community is alcoholized one it makes no difference whether the drinking has been done there or elsewhere) extra burdens are placed upon the shoulders of the sober citizens of that community. This is not just, and prohibitists have protested against such interference at the ballot box.

Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

I am in favor of the repeal of the present prohibition law. Lawlessness is raging amongst gangsters today. Contempt for law, lack of respect for constituted authority is rampant in many sections of the country today. Respect for constituted authority is the essence of a government's stability. Honest, loyal and obedience cry out for support, but this deference from our citizenry can not be invoked by retaining such an obnoxious law in our Constitution. It can't be enforced or be a success because it lacks the sanction of public opinion. It has been instrumental in producing more vice, more wealthy malefactors than any form of legislation in our country's history.

It has given birth to hypocrisy, poison liquor and domestic strife and not until its odious presence has been removed from our otherwise great Constitution will peace and tranquility prevail and the nation of the people, by the people and for the people shall live.

By S. S. EISENBERG
11 Beacon st., Boston.
Editor of Prohibition Opinion:

Nations are at much different from individuals. It takes a strong man or a strong nation to admit a mistake. The Eighteenth Amendment was well-intentioned, but a mistake. It has brought forth none of its blessed results. Speaking as an average citizen, I say that liquor, fait, indifferent and bad, has never been so plentiful, not a home, club, camp, store hotel or any establishment dealing in it but has it or can secure it.

The Eighteenth Amendment has taken thugs, tipsters, pimps, cheap gamblers, ordinary bums and others without visible means of support and made of them wealthy men, powerful and dangerous. It has corrupted municipal governments in every department; has destroyed the sense of lawfulness; has taken moment in wealth out of this country and is partly responsible for the present depression.

The Eighteenth Amendment was foisted on the people as a war measure, made extinct than they were ready to receive it and long before they were educated to accept it. You cannot successfully legislate for human nature, intellect or morality.

Repeal it, and having repealed it, let us frame a new, a sensible law, based upon our needs and tempered with our experience.

These Hot Cross Buns Good All the Year Round

WHILE Hot Cross Buns are, of course, especially appropriate for the Lenten season, there is no reason in the world why your family shouldn't enjoy them (perhaps minus the icing), the year round—and how! If they needed any excuse for being, they'd find it in the fact that they offer positive proof to the novice housewife that she can make "yeast bread" and "raised biscuits" with a minimum of effort and a maximum of success.

If you're fortunate enough to possess an electric mixer, it is the work of but a moment to pour the scalded milk into the big bowl, add the shortening and when lukewarm the dissolved yeast cake, sugar and salt. The flour—our favorite unbleached brand, of coure—next goes in with the raisins and currants and other ingredients, and the bread hook is quickly attached. In no time at all, you have a perfectly kneaded, smooth, elastic lough, ready to be shaped and placed to raise. If, however, you are going to knead your bread by hand, the procedure is just the same with the exception of the actual kneading on the bread board. This should be continued until the dough is elastic and has picked up all of the lightly dusted flour from the board. Remember two things in your bread making—the yeast plants are delicate and can be quickly chilled or scalded to death. Be sure that your liquid is not warmer than blood heat when the yeast is added, and also be sure that the dough is kept in a warm place during the raising period.

Here are the complete directions for the Hot Cross Buns.

HOT CROSS BUNS

1 cup scalded milk
½ cup sugar
2 tbsps. butter
½ tsp. salt
½ yeast cake dissolved in
¼ cup lukewarm water
¾ tsp. cinnamon
3 cups flour
1 egg
½ cup raisins stoned and quartered, or
½ cup currants

Add butter, sugar and salt to milk; when lukewarm, add dissolved yeast cake, cinnamon, flour and egg well beaten; when thoroughly mixed, add raisins, cover and let rise over night. In morning, shape in forms of large biscuits, place 20 minutes; cool and with ornamental frosting make a cross on top of each bun.

Glory in Turnips

UPTURNED noses round the family board when good old yellow turnip makes its appearance in the vegetable dish? Try this way of preparing this valuable and economical root vegetable, and see if opinions don't change.

Peel the turnips and cut them up. Cover with boiling salted water and boil until soft. Remove from the fire drain off the water and mash. When cool enough to handle, place a few tbsps. of the mashed turnip at a time in a piece of cheesecloth wrung out of cold water and squeeze some of the water out of the turnip. Repeat this operation until you have removed much of the water from all of the turnip. Then place in a bowl in the ice box until ready to use.

At this time, reheat in a double boiler, adding plenty of rich milk, butter and seasoning. The turnip will absorb the milk and butter in place of the water that has been squeezed out. Some people like to add a big spoonful of mashed potato to their mashed turnip, but prepared in this way it really is not necessary.

And in seasoning this, as all vegetable dishes, be particular about the kind of salt you use. The kind we prefer makes it easier for you to season properly because the salt itself is so pure and salty without a particle of bitterness. It seasons right through instead of just remaining on top of your food.

Did you ever stop to realize that food without salt would not keep you alive, for salt is essential to the formation of gastric juice?

IVORY SALT

Weekly Prize Brockton

THIS week's $5 recipe prize is awarded Mrs. Vernice Wright Boulette of 241 Ash st., Brockton, Mass., for her Crab Delight. She suggests this for a Bridge Luncheon, or Sunday Night Supper, and we rise to state that it would be a delight at any meal.

CRAB DELIGHT

Add 1 cup tomato soup to 1 cup cooked rice. Melt 3 tbsps. butter and cook in it 1 chopped onion very slowly until tender, being careful not to brown it. Add to the tomato soup and rice with 1 pimiento cut up fine. Now add 1 small can of Gritha Crab Meat and season with Worcester Salt and Slade's Pepper. Last of all stir in ½ pint of Hood's heavy cream. Serve on Sunshine Krispy Crackers. This can be made in the morning and reheated in a double boiler at serving time.

To prevent icing from sugaring, add a pinch of salt to the sugar when making cooked icing.

Two Specials in Ham

SNIFF! Sniff! What smells so good? That spiced baked Easter ham, of course, with its luscious brown coating of sugar and spice and bread crumbs, baked from Martha's own recipe.

And now that we've baked the ham, what are we going to do with the leftovers after the Easter dinner? Here are two suggestions.

HAM AND RICE NESTS WITH EGG

1 cup chopped left-over ham
3 cupss cooked rice
½ cup tomato puree or jellied duck
½ tsp. celery salt
1 small onion chopped
1 tsp. paprika
6 eggs

Mix the tomato puree or stock with celery salt, paprika and onion. Then add the cooked rice and the chopped ham, mixed thoroughly. The mixture should be stiff enough to mold into the shape of nests, allowing ½ cup of mixture for each nest. Make a hollow in the center, place the nest on a well greased baking pan and bake in a 375 deg. F. oven for 15 minutes until thoroughly heated and slightly brown. Remove pan from oven and break an egg in the hollow of each nest. Return to the oven and bake until the egg is set. Serve on a large platter or individual plates with asparagus or any other spring vegetables. A fruit salad and light dessert will complete this attractive luncheon.

HAM SLICE BAKED WITH NOODLES

1 slice ham
1½ cupfuls Creole sauce
3 cupfuls parboiled macaroni, spaghetti or noodles

Butter a casserole or deep baking dish. Place slice of ham in bottom and fry on top of stove until well browned. Then cover with the noodles or spaghetti and pour over the Creole sauce, made as follows:

CREOLE SAUCE

Chop fine 2 onions, a clove of garlic, and a tbsp. of cut ham; fry in butter, add a tsp. of flour and the juice drained from a can of tomatoes. Season with salt and red pepper and add a tbsp. of sugar dissolved in 1-3 cupful of vinegar. Cook for 15 to 20 minutes and serve.

Bake 1¼ hours in a moderate oven 375 deg. F. 15 minutes before serving, place the ham on top of the noodles to delicately brown and crisp on the edges. Serve with baked squash and a baked pudding.

CURLY SNAPS

½ c. molasses
½ tsp. ginger
1 tsp. butter
⅛ tsp. salt
1 c. flour
3-5 c. sugar

Heat molasses to a boil. Add butter and then slowly, stirring constantly, the other ingredients which have been sifted together. On oiled baking sheets drop ½ tsp. of batter at intervals of 2 to 2 inches. Bake in a slow oven, 325 to 350 F. for about 10 minutes. Cool slightly and roll over the handle of a wooden spoon.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

Something to Think About

Editor Boston American:

May I say a word in your Letter Column about courtesy to the census enumerators. They are not prying into family secrets, and they are asking questions which they are required to ask in their official position. Some of them are having a hard time in getting the requisite information.

They are getting used to having doors slammed in their faces in some of the outlying districts, while down in Connecticut one census taker was threatened with a gun.

In one case a husband did not know the maiden name of his wife and flew into a passion with the census taker because he asked such a question.

These are a few instances among many that are unreasonable and the result of ignorance. Try to help census takers, who walk daily many miles in country towns to get desired information. Don't argue with them about their rights to get information. Uncle Sam wants what they are after. That is sufficient.

A CENSUS TAKER.

Praises Dr. Rowley's Stand on Chickens

Editor Boston American:

I was much interested in an article published in the Boston Evening American, on April 11, discouraging the growing practice of buying chicks for children at Easter. Dr. Francis H. Rowley, president of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, charitably attributed the practice to "thoughtlessness" in stressing the deplorable mortality among these "motherless little creatures."

If ever there is a time for tenderness and mercy toward our dumb friends, it should be at Eastertide. In line with Dr. Rowley's appeal, may I suggest that many persons are equally thoughtless in the treatment of canaries and gold fish.

These pets should never be exposed to a glaring sun. A little early morning sun is beneficial, but too long a sun bath is injurious to a canary's eyes, and, in the case of gold fish in a glass globe, develops a glare and heat that subjects them to torture. Nor should pet canaries be exposed to draughts or kept outdoors in damp weather in summer months. These details, so apt to be ignored as trifling, mean much to the comfort and health of such household pets.

BIRD LOVER.

A Reminder for All Tercentenary Visitors

Editor Boston American:

During the Tercentenary visitors to this part of the country should not miss seeing two of the remaining windmills on Cape Cod.

Scores of windmills that once spread their sails to the Cape breezes are no more. The one at Eastham always attracted me. These windmills have an interesting history. They are specimens of high art and a dead industry.

Anyone familiar with their history cannot help but cherish the feeling that everything will be done to preserve these relics of the past.

They are so completely intertwined with the early history of Cape Cod industries that they claim this particular year more than usual attention.

Proposes Congress Pray Each Week

Editor Boston American:

It sight be well for the United States Senate to imitate the Thursday prayer meeting held in the British House of Commons without a break since the reign of William IV. Does not such devotion in this commercial age reveal some of the secrets of England's greatness and would it do our Senate and House of Representatives any harm, considering some recent action, to emulate the British House of Commons in this respect?

Clean and Paint Up Week Here Again

Editor Boston American:

The annual cleanup period is at hand, perhaps earlier than usual. It is, however, well that an early start be made this year in view of the fact that the Commonwealth has provided for an official celebration of the tercentenary of the Massachusetts Bay Colony. His Excellency, the Governor, has requested that cities and towns clean up and His Honor, the mayor of this city, has ordered that all streets and alleys, private as well as public, be thoroughly cleaned. He has for that special purpose instructed the commissioner of public works to employ 100 men in order that our highways and byways be made spotless.

The sanitary forces of the city will start April 14 next, and will continue through the month, so do not fail or neglect to have your front and back yards and adjoining alleys thoroughly cleaned. It is important that rubbish and other material be placed in receptacles in an easily accessible place to be removed by the city forces.

The Boston cleanup committee joins heartily with His Excellency, the Governor, and His Honor, the Mayor, in this movement to make Boston clean and attractive, and it is earnestly hoped that every man, woman and child in this city will join in this campaign to make our city beautiful and charming in the millions who will visit here this year.

I would appeal also to the citizens associations, local improvement societies and settlement and neighborhood houses to join actively in this great movement that will mean so much to Boston.

Teachers' Spanking Days Are At An End

Editor Boston American:

A woman teacher in Kansas attempted to punish a boy of 15, but he punished her, so severely that she is now suing him for $90,000 damages.

You had in your letter column a short time ago something on judges spanking boys as punishment for their crimes. Judges should profit by the example of the Kansas teacher. A word to the wise is sufficient.

Arena A. C. Boxing Show Is Called Off

MR. BOSTON by JACK CONWAY

Jack Conway

MR. BOSTON was filled with baseball enthusiasm when he breezed into the Sporting Department today.

"Who said baseball is losing its hold on the public?" demanded the veteran. "I ask the bird who offered this argument to step forward and plead guilty. I will then sentence him to watch racquet and ping-pong matches for the rest of his days.

"Some 10,000 persons risked pneumonia and everything else to watch the Red Sox and Braves battle in that beetle 11-inning game Saturday.

"On Sunday some 2500 dyed-in-the-wool diamond rooters gave the merry laugh to a rain storm and saw the two teams battle again. I didn't think anybody would attempt a ball game on Sunday owing to the frightful weather conditions. It was 11 p. m. when Billy Cunnell, bubbling over with the spirit of youth, told me that his Braves had made it two straight over the Sox. The youthful baseball scribe was much upset when I hinted that perhaps the Braves have made their record winning streak for the season.

"All this shows that the old town is ready to toss its arms right around our baseball heroes.

Fans Hopeful for Winning Ball Club

"THE poets claim hope springs eternal in the human breast. Perhaps this is why there is so much baseball talk around town despite the fact the Braves and Sox have been hope-scotching around the cellar for so many years.

"The fans are as hopeful for a winning team as a bird in the death house is that he is going to get a reprieve. As once in a while a condemned criminal wins freedom, our baseball clubs also may eventually get going. Anyhow the Braves and Sox look promising and if you can show me any sport which gives the fan as much for a dollar as baseball does you can pick up the marbles.

"So let everybody hustle out to Fenway Park tomorrow and root for the Sox to win. Also give Heinie Wagner a great big hand."

Claims Griffith Will Come Back to Win

ONE Thomas Grogan, who slings hash and hot bis-cuits in a one-man place on Pearl st., has written Mr. Boston about Tuffy Griffith, Jack Gagnon and the young men who are writing red hot sport articles for the newspapers. Mr. Grogan cannot make whoopee on Saturdays as that was the day he selected to branch forth as an expert. He writes as follows:

"Place Tuffy Griffith a 5 to 1 shot to win from Jack Gagnon when they meet again on April 30. It will be another case of Kid McCoy vs. Jack McCormack. When they collided in their first bout, Mac took a sixth round K. O. d McCoy. In their return tussle, history tells us McCoy riddled McCormack."

Takes Some Hot Shots at Dear Old Experts

HERE is Mr. Grogan's barrage at the dear old sports writers who are trying to keep the wolf off the front lawn by making typewriters click rather than digging ditches:

"Mr. Boston: Here is something the public would like to know. How is it and how a person can get on with some paper? After awhile he writes about all kinds of sports and criticises everything. The sport writers will tell you what to do and how to do it. They even tell the managers who have followed a game for years, how to play it. How do the writers here get such great authorities? It must be a gift."

To which Mr. Boston answers:

"It is a gift. But then one doesn't have to know much about sports to be at least one up on some of the birds who are rated as great managers of this and that. I think that the sports writers gained their knowledge of the various pastimes by smoking those cigarettes that haven't a cough in a carload and by trying to keep awake all night in friendly places here and there.

"But just think, Mr. Grogan, if some of the sport writers had not secured their present jobs they might be slinging hash, teaching school, bossing a bigger squad or in politics. They are at least working where they can only do damage to a person's feelings. At that I know sport writers who go home nights, don't beat their wives, drink nothing stronger than ginger ale and who take the family out for a ride every Sunday.

MIDLAND GOLFERS WIN

By BILL GRIMES

IN the opening team matches of the Women's Golf Association of Boston which were played today, Midland, Northern and Southern came through with victories.

Midland took the Country Club into camp, 7 to 2, at Brookline. Central fell before Northern at Weston by the same score, while Brae Burn won only one match from Southern, losing 8 to 1.

In the opening match at Clyde Park, Brookline, the Midland District scored a 7 to 2 victory over the Country Club, but it necessitated three extra-hole matches, two of which were won by the victors, to put over the win. In the third extra hole match Mrs. J. A. L. Blake of the Country Club defeated Mrs. J. K. Leonard in a 21-hole match.

This match was one of the finest contests of the day, for at no time during the long battle were the players separated by more than one hole.

Mrs. H. F. Pruneret, Jr., of Midland staged a wonderful comeback to defeat Mrs. W. G. Quimby of the Country Club, 1 up in 19 holes. Mrs. Pruneret was four down going to the 15th, but she started a spurt which was so successful that she was 1 up at the 18th tee.

However, she missed a short putt on the home green which sent the match to extra holes but she managed to come back again after her costly slip and win.

Southern District won eight of the nine matches from Brae Burn at Wollaston this morning. Two extra-hole matches featured the play.

Mrs. H. R. Watson defeated Mrs. W. M. Ferris, Jr. at the 20th hole while Mrs. L. H. Dalton lost to Mrs. M. Philbrick at the 21st.

Brae Burn was weakened by the absence of three of its first strong players and was forced to draft three players from the second team.

Terrier Nine to Play Yale Thursday

With two wins in as many starts already to their credit, Boston University's varsity baseball tossers will attempt to add three more victims to their list this week, when Springfield, Yale and Tufts will provide the opposition.

The Terriers will travel to Spring field, Wednesday, to cross bats with the Gymnasts, and will move on to New Haven the next day, where they will clash with Yale. Tufts will help B. U. open its home season at Nickerson Field, Saturday afternoon.

Pittsfield, April 14—"Ribber" McCoy, the former Holy Cross football star, and Joe DeVito of Providence meet in the semifinal bout of an all-star card, which will be staged at the Winter Gardens here tonight.

Hughie Duffy plans a hard week of practice for he feels that no changes are not yet in the form to tack a win on the invaders from the Bronx. Fordham will visit the Heights with one of its best nines. They opened successfully against Princeton, ringing up an 11-7 victory.

Real estate sales are growing steadily in Boston. If you ever intend to own your home, now isn't too soon. Say the home you've admired today in the Classified Ads.

ALLEN TO BOX PAYNE ON APRIL 28

BOB McKIEDY, matchmaker of the Arena A. C., called off the boxing show featuring a bout between Harry Allen and Pat O'Flaherty which was slated for tonight.

The Arena will run its next show, April 28, with Harry Allen meeting Tiger Payne.

McKiedy was forced to postpone tonight's show owing to the fact that Pat O'Flaherty reported in poor condition. The South Boston battler had been substituted for Tiger Payne, who was originally scheduled to meet Allen tonight.

Harvard Planning Interclass Games

Interclass baseball at Harvard will get under way Wednesday, when candidates for the team will meet A. W. Samborski, director of intramural athletics.

A meeting will be held at the temporary locker building on Soldiers Field, when sophomore, junior and senior class squads will be organized.

Yanks Release Polli to Louisville Club

VETERANS TO GET GREETING

The Hub will greet two of the greatest monarchs in the history of the boxing game today upon the arrival here of Jack Johnson, former heavyweight champion of the world and Gentleman Jack O'Brien, retired as undefeated light heavyweight champion of the world. These ring veterans come to the Hub today for their three-round exhibition match at Mechanics Building tomorrow night on the same card with Honeyboy Finnegan of Dorchester and Johnny Farr of Cleveland.

Honeyboy Finnegan, probably the most courageous fighter ever developed in this city, will finish his training today at Arthur's gym and his appearance tomorrow night will mark the first time in two years that the Dorchester boy will enter the ring with his full strength at his disposal.

Boxer K. O.'s Holdup Man; Injures Hand

Chicago, April 14 (AP)—It has cost Pete Wistort, Chicago heavyweight boxer, a fractured left hand and several opportunities to engage in his business to save $9 from a holdup man.

Wistort, who has been out of action several months following an injury to the same left hand, was accosted last night by a man with a pistol, as he was walking home. When ordered to "stick 'em up" Distort thought of his $9 and promptly let the holdup man have both fists to the head.

He scored a knockout, grabbed the pistol, left the man lying on the sidewalk and hurried home to discover the left hand had crumpled. Now he is wondering if the $9 will last until he can fight again.

In addition to defending her singles titles at Auteuil and Wimbledon, Mrs. Moody will play in the Wightman Cup matches against England.

While here Mrs. Moody will attend an exhibition of her drawings and paintings at the Grand Central Art Galleries.

Amateur Quintets Continue Title Play

All the surviving teams in the amateur basketball tournament of the Boys' Club of Boston will swing into action in the first four days of this week at the Eben D. Jordan memorial gym in Charlestown. Because of the fact that this is Holy Week, no games are scheduled for Friday and Saturday. The last round will be played early next week with the finals a week from Saturday night.

It will be the eighth meeting between the two combinations in this international competition for the trophy presented by Bernon S. Prentice, chairman of the International Intercollegiate committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association. Harvard and Yale have won four matches and Oxford and Cambridge three.

REDS HAVE THE PUNCH—HOWLEY

New York, (AP)—Dan Howley, who has moved from the American to the National league to manage the Cincinnati Reds, has only one worry and he is not alone in that, for most managers at this season of the year are wondering what their pitchers will or will not do for them later.

"I am sure we have the punch to make things unpleasant for the other teams," said the genial Dan.

"In addition to the hitters the Reds had last year we have brought in two great long distance hitters in Harry Heilmann and Bob Meusel, and Tony Cuccinello, the youngster from Columbus, has shown that he can hit about as far as anybody.

"We have added some fielding strength, too, for Leo Durocher is a capable a fielder as I have seen in my many years of baseball, and certainly Huzhie Critz can go out on with anybody in the game. From the limited chance I have seen to observe the others in action, I have seen nothing to worry about the defense.

"All I can promise is that the team will hustle every minute of every game. There's nothing like clicking in and at 'em and then clicking out again to battle 'em in the field. This cannot fail to show results."

ZARYNOFF HAS CHANCE TO WIN

Count George Zarynoff, colorful Russian heavyweight, will start training today at Toland's gymnasium for his finish match with Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg for the heavyweight championship of the world.

The bout will be held at the Garden on April 24 and is expected to draw one of the largest crowds that has attended a sporting event in New England in the past year.

The Dynamiter is on the Pacific Coast, but he will return to Boston next Sunday, to prepare himself for a meeting with the fastest and flashiest wrestler to come to the front in recent years. Zarynoff is the talk of the town because of his spectacular style of acrobatic wrestling, and on his speed and skill, he must be rated as at least an even bet to win the title from Gus the Goat.

The six members of the varsity tennis team who played two matches, with Norfolk, Va., Country Club and the William and Mary racquet wielders, are home again.

Thirty members of the varsity track team which defeated William and Mary in a dual meet, 93 to 33, will be out of the Soldiers Field cinders this afternoon begin the second lap of their training for the coming meets.

The varsity lacrosse squad which spent the past week at Syracuse, also returned and will drill on the business school field today.

Marksmen Victors Over New Bedford

Fall River, April 14—Fall River had a hard fight to squeeze out a 2 to 1 win over New Bedford in an Atlantic Coast League match here.

New Bedford had several chances to win, but blew a penalty kick and a few setups. The Marksmen had a big advantage in the first half, but could not score, and in the second period it was about an even battle. Paterson tallied for the Whalers, then McNab and Nilsen sunk counters for Fall River.

Detroit, April 14—Jackie Fields, welterweight champion, will defend his title against young Jack Thompson of Chicago in a 15-round bout at Olympia Arena on May 8. Fields won his title from Joe Dundee of Baltimore on a foul.

BRAVES PLAY HOLY CROSS TODAY

By BILL CONNELL

Veteran and rookie work together as a battery this afternoon for the Braves when the National League ball club plays Holy Cross College at Worcester.

Bobby Brown, 18-year-old right handed pitcher, from Nantasket, is slated to fling for the Tribe and his slants will be handled by Hank Gowdy, who was romping on the big time diamonds when Brown was in rompers and played with nothing harder than a rubber ball.

Bill Connell

Holy Cross is playing its first ball game of the season, and Gene Hebert, fast ball artist of the Crusaders, probably will toss them up to the Tribesmen.

The college team will be under somewhat of a disadvantage for it has not played a game this year. The regular season opens for the Purple next Saturday at Worcester.

Boston's Warriors do not figure this clash as any setup. Last year, the Braves did defeat the college team, but the game was close, and the big leaguers had to play their best ball to gain the award.

This season, though, the Braves have picked up extra power at bat and in the field, and so should be more than a match for the collegians. The Braves have been hitting well all spring.

Even when the Tribe struck a slump on the barnstorming trip and lost seven games leaving Miami at the start of the trek Northward, the warriors were hitting freely.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

Good golf is never acquired all at once, yet oddly nearly all of you suffer the delusion that next time out you will improve vastly. Skill is developed little by little, like the hair slipping away from the terrace just above your eyes. Yet golfing improvement can be accomplished in rather rapid order when you back up and start right, which implies starting with good form. And as I said at the beginning of the week, is the act of swinging the club. Remember that, and apply that basic thought each time you prepare to stroke the ball along. It is easy enough to give the club a rhythmic, smooth swing when you simply swing it at nothing at all, in practice. If you can do that, it should teach you this much—that actually you have a swing. Now —use it. Now comes the rub. It is one thing to practise swing the club, another to apply the same easy, smooth swing to the ball. But you golf, at least far better golf than your average, lies just beyond that hurdle, if you can school yourself to take it. I promise you this, that the application of your own easy practice swing to your real stroke, during rounds of play, is not half as difficult as are some of the things you are trying to do. Try it —you should be glad to know.

Tufts Plays Brown Nine on Wednesday

Tufts' nine will meet Brown at the Oval on Wednesday and Boston University at Weston on Saturday.

Brown will give the Jumbos its first real test in the Wednesday game, and Ken Nash is expecting to send his right-handed ace, Lou Adams, against the Bruins.

KOSKI TO RUN IN B. A. A. MARATHON

THE entire team of the Finnish American A. C. is entered in the B. A. A. Marathon, which will be run on Saturday.

The members are Willie Kyronen, Karl Koski and Dave Fagerlund. Twenty-two more entries bring the total up to 112.

Joe Tawlis of the Dedham A. A., Frank and Melvin Burt, both of the Boston Newfoundland Marathon Club; Steven Givariella of Wellesley Highlands, Lewis W. Smith of the Dorchester Club, Ford Clark, Jr., of Bangor, Al Brand from Franklin, Russell Mason of Brockton, George L. Durgin of Manchester, James Veltanes of the Brookline Social Club, Ed Buzzell of Medford, Paul E. Jostedt of the Bridgeport Y, Harold Adams of the Signal Corps, M. N. G.; James M. Ferrick of Saxonville Boys' A. C., Alexander C. Montais of the Greek-American A. C., Anthony Ryan of Brookline, Kenneth G. Haskell of Roxbury, John Tahl of Salem and Lawson H. O'Brien of Sharon are the latest additions.

The Finnish team is going after the team trophy with just three men. If the Finns do as well as they did last year they can win easily. Koski was second and Kyronen third. Fagerlund is a plugger and may have the urge to complete the race so that the team prize will go to New York.

American Cup Defender, Enterprise, Is Launched

SHAMROCK V ALSO SLIDES DOWN WAYS

BRISTOL, R. I., April 14—Enterprise, the first of four prospective defenders of the America's Cup to be competed, was launched here today at about the same hour the challenger, Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock V., slid down the ways at Gosport, England.

A crowd of more than 1000 persons watched the Vanderbilt syndicate cup racer take her maiden plunge in the waters of Narragansett Bay after christening ceremonies at the Herreshoff yards, where she was built.

Mrs. Winthrop W. Aldrich, wife of one of the Vanderbilt syndicate members, broke a bottle of champagne across her bronze-plated bow and she floated at 8:10.

TO RACE IN TRIALS.

Harold S. Vanderbilt, Winthrop Aldrich and W. Starling Burgess, her designer, were on the deck of the Enterprise as she left the stocks. She will be towed to City Island, N. Y., where her masts will be stepped.

Vanadis's yacht, Vara, swung at anchor off the Herreshoff yard, where another prospective defender, the Morgan syndicate Weeta-moe, is nearing completion.

With Weetamoe, Yankee and Whirlwind, the latter two nearing completion at Lawley's yard, Neponset, Mass., the Enterprise will race off Newport July 17-19 and August 20-30, in trials to decide which of the four is selected to meet the Shamrock V in defense of the America's Cup in a series of four-out-of-seven races off Newport starting September 13.

NAMED FOR WARSHIP.

A happy omen attended the launching of the Enterprise, for as her stern broke water the sun shone through a light fog upon her bronze and white coloring.

Although all are of 76-foot rating, she is smaller than the other three boats building and slightly smaller than the Lipton craft. She bears the name of a famous navy schooner, "the lucky little Enterprise," which helped bring the Barbary pirates to terms a century ago.

Lipton Cup Yacht Launched in England

Gosport, Eng., April 14 (AP)—Sir Thomas Lipton's yacht Shamrock V, with which he will make his latest attempt for the historic America's cup, was launched today.

The Countess of Shaftsbury broke a bottle of champagne over the bow of the craft as it slid down into the water gracefully to the accompaniment of ringing cheers from a big crowd in and around the building shed.

As the famous sportsman's fifth challenger slid into the waters, she made a striking picture of grace and beauty under a bright sun.

For an accompaniment, a band played "Dear Little Shamrock" in honor of the vessel upon which Sir Thomas has again staked his hope in his indefatigable quest for the historic cup which thus far has proved so difficult of attainment.

With the launching of the Shamrock V, Sir Thomas is renewing a struggle for the famous cup that he began in 1899 with Shamrock I, which lost to the Columbia. Two years later he tried again with the Shamrock II, and again being defeated tried for a third time in 1903, with the Shamrock III, this time competing against the Reliance. There was a long interval until 1920 before Sir Thomas was in the field again and this time it took seven races before the American yacht Resolute was able to defeat the Shamrock IV.

Billiard Champion in Exhibition Here

Johnny Layton, world champion in three-cushion billiards, will engage in four exhibition matches with the best available opposition in the Twentieth Century room, 63 Summer st., today and tomorrow afternoon and evening.

Ed Snodgrass, an outstanding Boston player, will be Layton's opponent in this afternoon's match.

[illegible] is scheduled for 3 o'clock. Walter Andrew St. Jean or Charles Schaack, both nationally known as three-cushion and pocket billiard players, is expected to meet the champion in the evening match, which will begin at 8 o'clock.

Swedish F. C. Wins Curley Cup Tie, 1-0

Swedish F. C. remains in the Curley soccer cup competition by reason of its smart 1 to 0 victory over Norwegian Americans at North Brighton. Nyman, former Boston player, got the lone marker by converting a penalty kick awarded against an opposing defense man for tripping Olander.

College Nines Plan Unique Twin Bill

Middletown, Conn., April 14—Wesleyan University and Trinity College will play a unique double-header on June 14. A seven-inning game will be played at Middletown and then the team will travel in buses to Hartford for another seven-inning game. June 14 will be class day at both institutions.

Gibbons Passed Up Title Shot Promoters Had Difficult Task Mr. Jacobs Didn't Hesitate

By Damon Runyon

WHEN you consider the figure that Mr. Kane refused for Mr. Tom Gibbons to fight Harry Wills, it is rather remarkable to find Herr Max Schmeling and the Sharkey man fighting for a percentage of the gate receipts for that same Milk Fund, though, of course, in this instance, the heavyweight championship of the world is involved, and it is unlikely that they will get less than $200,000 apiece.

Still, if Mr. Tom Gibbons had taken the Wills match, and the chance of winning, nothing could have kept him out of a second crack at the world's title with Jack Dempsey, with a big financial guarantee, and Mr. Tom Gibbons had once fought Dempsey 15 tough hests for practically nothing.

Damon Runyon

Yet oddly enough, Mr. Tom Gibbons once accepted considerably less money for a battle for the Milk Fund than any other fighter save one that ever appeared under its auspices.

Gibbons Once Thought $12,500 a Big Purse

HE came into New York in 1922 with a roll of 21 consecutive knockouts behind him, such as they were and he accepted $12,500 for a fight with Harry Greb in the old Madison Square Garden. It happened, however, that the $12,500 was more money than Mr. Tom Gibbons had ever before received for a bout, and he was tickled to death, especially as he thought Greb a very soft touch for him.

As it turned out, the show drew $117,000, and Mr. Gibbons got a pasting. Greb wasn't middleweight champion then. He was fighting light heavies, mainly, and Greb, too, thought Mr. Gibbons was pretty likely to outfumble him. It is only fair to say that Tom was a sick man that night before he entered the ring, and if he hadn't been fighting for the Milk Fund, he would have cancelled the date.

Greb and Moore in Title Battle

INSTEAD of Gibbons and Harry Wills, the Milk Fund put on a middleweight championship show in 1925, signing up Harry Greb, who had in the meantime licked Johnny Wilson for the title, with the new sensation of the day, M. Ovila Chapdelaine, otherwise Jack Delaney. Greb was getting $50,000 and Delaney almost as much. It was what the boys call a "natural" and would have drawn big.

Jack was taken down with an attack of appendicitis after plans for the show were well under way and a hurried canvass of the field of middleweight contenders developed that something was wrong with every one of them. Also Paul Berlenbach, then the biggest drawing card in the East, who was matched to meet Young Stribling in a six-rounder, which was regarded as 50 per cent of the strength of the card, got a badly cut eye and had to pull out.

'TWAS a sad time for the Milk Fund promoters, accustomed to huge successes. Tommy Loughran was dug up at a late hour to take Berlenbach's place, but that didn't help much. Then it was that Mr. Wilton Farnsworth of the promotorial forces remembered that Ted Moore, one of the leading English middleweights, was in this country under the management of Josephus Jacobs, now Herr Schmeling's favorite manager, and your operative hastened to Mr. Jacobs forthwith, armed with a line of categorical questions.

Jacobs Confident Moore Would Win

"Mr. Jacobs," was the first question, "do you think Ted Moore can lick Harry Greb?"

"Like breaking sticks," was the answer.

"Then if you think Ted Moore can lick Harry Greb, you would take a match with Harry Greb for very little money, would you not?" (Question No. 2.)

"Very, very little," replied Mr. Jacobs.

"Well, you are going to be offered very, very little," said your operative. "Very, very, very little. But if you honestly think Ted Moore can lick Harry Greb, it's enough to pay you for the match, because you can make plenty out of the little. If you don't think Ted Moore can lick Harry Greb, just forget the offer. You can have $3500."

Mr. Josephus Jacobs didn't bat an eye.

"The match is on," he said. It isn't often a contender thinks that well of himself.

Moore didn't beat Greb. He didn't even come close. Greb cut $20,000 off his price at the change in opponents. He had a low estimate of Moore's ability. And yet I always had a lot of respect for the Englishman in grabbing at his one big chance.

The blend that revolutionized smoking

THE INCOMPARABLE BLEND of Camel Cigarettes is probably the most important discovery in the history of smoking. It made cigarette smoking popular. Camel changed the smoking habits of the nation and has given pleasure to more millions of people than any other cigarette.

This exclusive blend assures in Camel a smoothness, a mildness and a mellow fragrance that cannot be imitated. It preserves all the excellent qualities of the choice tobaccos of which Camels are made and melds them all together into a delightful harmony of smoke pleasure. It sets Camel apart as a cigarette of distinctive character and provides for Camel smokers the very highest form of smoking luxury.

DAILY ANTIQUE

No. 71

Here's an old chest of very early Colonial origin. It is a so-called blanket chest, with hoof-jack legs, and of plain construction. Many of these early chests went through the hands of more or less expert wood carvers, sometimes years after their original construction. The workmanship of this piece, though of the simplest, shows in good taste and the sense of proportion of the cabinet maker who turned it out.

Though entirely devoid of ornamentation, it displays graceful lines. The chest is owned by Mrs. G. B. Morgan of 70 Auburndale ave., West Newton.

In connection with the Massachusetts Tercentenary Year, the Boston Evening American is publishing daily photographs of interesting antiques. Owners of genuine antiques, particularly of Colonial or early American origin or of historic association are invited to forward photographs and records for publication. If a photograph is not available, the American will send a cameraman to photograph the antique, provided the owner lives in Greater Boston. Address the "Antique Editor, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston."

Miss Lorraine Defren, president of the club.

The Harvard Flying club has accepted the invitation and will have their Travel Air biplane at the Cape field.

Curtiss-Wright Flying Service Skyways, East Coast Aircraft Corporation, the Army and the National Guard will be represented.

Garrett Witness Testifies Police Failed to Remedy Vice Conditions in South End

B. Preston Clark, 40 years a member of the Lincoln House Association, South End, was the first witness at the opening of the Garrett hearing at the State House.

Sworn by Atty.-Gen. Warner, he was questioned by Special Asst. Atty.-Gen. Hall. The witness said that about July 25, 1925, he sent a letter to Police Commissioner Wilson. He identified this letter with an enclosure. Before reading the letter into the record, Atty. Hall said:

"I expect to connect Mr. Garrett up with this matter a little later."

The first letter read in substance that Grace B. Wills, head of the Lincoln House, was taking a leap interest in the Dover street section of South End. The letter stated that Miss Wills was sensible and told of

"We have deep interest in the Dover street section. We want the children there to grow up and be good citizens."

BLAMES COURT

It was explained that this letter bore on a communication which Miss Wills had sent the police commissioner.

The Wills letter, introduced and read, touched on flagrant conditions of immorality in Compton st. It referred to the fact that the complaints made by the association were in the hands of two district attorneys. The letter gave the addresses of the houses on Compton st. which were designated houses of prostitution. It stated that young boys and girls frequented these houses and that the residents of the community were afraid to make complaints to the authorities.

"They turn to us for assistance," the letter said. "They are afraid of being killed by the lawless ones."

Reference was also made in the Wills letter to houses in Emerald, Dover and Village sts., and stated inquiries by members of the association to police as to why they were not closed were met with the answer:

"Their arrests are not sustained by the court."

The letter urged that someone in authority intervene to purify the district, as "all the good people are moving out of the district. Girls on streets are too dreadful to see."

The witness identified a letter he received from Commissioner Wilson dated July 28, 1929, which acknowledged receipt of the Clark and Wills letters. The letters said:

"I immediately upon receipt of these letters, took up the matter with Capt. Patterson of the vice and narcotic squads. I assure you I want to clean up conditions.

Q.—Now, Mr. Clark, I want to know from you in connection with your experience of 40 years, what you observed in that section to which these letters refer? A.—Her letter describes these conditions so well that I can't improve upon it. Personally I had knowledge of the conditions she states. It's not a bit too strongly drawn.

Q.—On July 29 did you receive a letter from Police Commissioner Wilson with enclosure which I show you? A.—I did.

HAD AN INTERVIEW

Q.—What did you do? A.—I had an interview with Commissioner Wilson. The substance of that interview was the same story as embodied in the letters.

He said he would take up the matter with the vice squad and see that these conditions were bettered. We told him there was a continuance of these conditions from year to year.

Q.—Did you tell him about the various appeals made to the captains? A.—My recollection is we did. In fact, in that letter it says there were appeals to patrolmen and higher officers for a period of years.

Q.—Did you receive on August 3 this letter which I show you? A.—Yes.

This letter was from Wilson to Clark, dated August 2, 1929. It referred to Clark's letter to Wilson dated July 25 and contained a report by Capt. Patterson. In substance it stated men had been placed in front of three houses on Compton st.

Notation was made of the number of men seen in front of the house, some trying to gain admission, and in every instance, according to Patterson's report, the occupants of the houses were married.

Q.—After the exchange of all this correspondence with police officials did conditions improve? A.—They did not.

Conditions Bad

Q.—They were open and flagrant as before? A.—Yes.

Q.—When did you get relief? A.—After the Reinstein murder when the federal authorities stepped in.

Q.—In past 10 years in the vicinity of Lincoln House conditions have been deplorable? A.—Yes.

Q.—And in spite of appeals to police, captains and Commissioner Wilson? A.—Exactly what I mean to say.

Frederick E. Simmons, assistant clerk of the Dorchester district court, was the next witness.

Lourie asked him:

Q.—Have you examined the records re search or forfeiture of liquor seized at the Wellington Garage, Harvard ave., in February, 1928? A.—I went back over the records from October 1, 1927, to April 1, 1928, and find there is no search warrant nor a warrant to seize.

He was then dismissed without further questioning by Mr. Lourie.

The next witness was Enrico Salerno of Maverick st., East Boston. He said he had lived in the United States 40 years and conducted a grocery store in Maverick Square, East Boston.

Hall referred to an exhibit consisting of a letter from Lieut. Hyland of Station 7 to Supt. Crowley.

Hall read the letter.

Hall then asked the witness:

His House Raided

Q.—Who came to your store on July 3, 1926? A.—Officers Daley, Roche and four others.

Q.—Did they find an liquor? A.—They found a gallon of liquor in the back yard, then five of them went away. Later they came back and told me they had searched my house but had found no liquor. I asked them how they had gotten in and they said they got in all right.

Q.—How many took you to headquarters? A.—Three or four.

Q.—What did they do on the way? A.—They took out a pint of liquor and the four of them drank it up.

Q.—How soon did you go back from headquarters to the store? A.—About an hour later. They gave me back the keys and I went to the house, opened the door and found everything in disorder. I then went to the store, and when my wife came later I told her what had happened.

Q.—Was there anything missing from the house? A.—Yes, from my flat my wife's diamond ring and $175 in money.

From my mither-in-law's flat in the same house there was missing $160 in money.

GOT NO SATISFACTION

Hall then read into the record a report of Chief Inspector Armstrong dated July 5, 1926, as follows:

"Enrico Salerno, arrested for violation of liquor law by Officers Garrett, Fortin, Spitz, Daley and Roche, without warrant, for keeping and exposing for sale. With search warrants, Harry Salerno, six pints of liquor."

Q.—Who was your lawyer? A.—J. J. Cronin.

Q.—On his advice you pleaded guilty and were fined $50? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you complain of the robbery to Special Officer Driscoll? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you ever get any satisfaction? A.—No.

The next witness was Mrs. Angelina Salerno, wife of the previous witness.

She testified her mother owned the house in which she and her husband lived and said she was born in this country.

Asked to relate what happened on July 3, 1926, she said during the day she had been in Roslindale with her mother and family. When she returned, she said, she met her husband and was informed by him of the raid by the officers.

She went there and found the place in great disorder. Before leaving that morning, the witness said, her mother had planned to deposit $160 in a bank, but was in such a hurry that she left the money in the bankbook on the mantlepiece.

Upon their return the bankbook was found on a chair, but the money was gone.

Seven plush chairs had been cut at the bottom, the witness said, and the mattresses turned over. Three bottles of liquor on which the revenue tax had been paid had not been taken, she said.

Mrs. Salerno said the children had a dime bank with $5 in it. They had saved it up to buy clothes and shoes. That was gone. And $90 in bills in a drawer in the bedroom had gone, also five silver dollars, and there was 75 cents in nickels on a shelf of the stove. Even that was taken away. A diamond ring valued at $400, which was kept in a jewelry box, was taken. The rest of the jewelry was not touched.

Mrs. Salerno testified that she went through the house, found no windows broken or doors pried open, with the exception of an attic door that was forced from the inside. She said she first complained to Special Officer Driscoll and at the court hearing of her husband case, then five of them named Cronin, hired a stenographer to take the testimony of the police.

WHAT HINES SAID

Q.—Did you hear a conversation between your attorney and Lieut. Hines in Suffolk Superior Court? A.—Yes. Mr. Cronin took me into the assistant district attorney's office and I heard Lieut. Hines say, "I can trust my men, and if you can prove they stole money and jewelry you'd better bring it into court." They talked about it for some time and then came over to my husband and me.

Mr. Cronin said: "I'll tell you what you'd better do. You'd better withdraw your appeal from East Boston court and pay a $50 fine. The police are all against you." I said to my attorney: "What about the money and jewelry we lost?"

He said: "They'll take care of that this afternoon." I said to my lawyer: "We hired you for our attorney and to give us advice." We were not satisfied, but we decided to do what he told us.

Q.—Did you ever get your money or jewelry back? A.—No, we couldn't afford to fight for it.

Q.—Did you ever hear anything from it? A.—Not a word.

Wilbur F. Turner, handwriting expert, was recalled and produced a number of deposit slips and checks on the Oliver B. Garrett accounts, which were read into the record by Atty. Hall. Two of these accounts were Christmas Club savings in the name of Oliver B. Garrett, closed out in December, 1928, and totalling $350.

Two accounts, also Christmas Club savings, totalled $253. Other deposit slips read into the record were from the Brighton Five Cents Savings bank in the account of Florence H. Garrett, showed deposits from Feb. 18, 1925, to Aug. 7, 1929, of $1085. All deposits were made in cash in sums from $19 to $200 in bills.

Another account in the same bank, ending March, 1926, in the account of Mrs. Florence H. Garrett, showed deposits of $100 in bills.

Asst. Atty.-Gen. Hall continued reading into the records the list of deposit slips representing sums of money deposited by Oliver B. Garrett of 9 Blackwood st., Boston, in the First National Bank of Boston entitled "new account opened."

They wer eas follows:

January 21, 1926, $150 in bills.
January 29, 1926, $300 in bills.
December 24, 1926, $100 in bills.
January 6, 1927, $60 in bills.
January 25, 1927, $150 in bills.
December 26, 1928, $300 in bills
January 21, 1929, $200 in bills.
January 29, 1929, $250 in bills.
April 8, 1929, $300 in bills.
April 11, 1929, $500 in bills.
September 28, 1929, $150 in bills.
October 25, 1929, $25 in bills.

SPEAKS FOR CITIZENS

At this point there was a conference between Hall and Asst. Atty.-Gen. Clapp following which witness J. Preston Clark was called to the stand.

Clark addressed Atty.-Gen. Warner, saying he wished to stand there as spokesman for a group of workingmen living back of where the Lincoln House is situated in the South End.

"We have self-respecting families, the children are fine material for citizenship, they are a great group of fine youngsters. I wish to draw the contrast. I wish to show that these families are obliged to bring up their children near this pest hole. I stand here as spokesman for this group of workingmen," Clark said.

Turner, the handwriting expert was then recalled.

Hall said, "I now offer in evidence the original deposit slips of Florence H. Garrett on the Boulevard Trust Company, Account No. 1149. These deposit slips show that the deposits were made from 1925 down in various amounts running from $20 to $200, all deposits in bills, except two small checks.

Numerous deposit slips were introduced on different banks where accounts were maintained in the name of F. H. Redden, Oliver B. Garrett, Florence H. Garrett, Florence H. Woodside and Mrs. Florence Garrett for Oliver B. Garrett in the years 1923 to 1929.

Q. (By Hall to Turner)—Have you examined these various deposit slips and determined which were written by Mrs. Garrett and which by Oliver B. Garrett? A.—Yes.

Q.—Have you prepared a schedule of how many by each? A.—Yes. The schedule, a huge sheet measuring approximately three feet by four feet, was introduced as an exhibit.

Quincy Couple Held in Kidnaping of Girl, 8

A Story of Some Folks Who Might Be in Your Office —or Your Husband's

What Has Gone Before

WHEN Janet Andrews went home for the day with a headache Lawrence Eaton, head of the Eaton Advertising Agency, went into the office of Timothy Sanders, the vice-president, and borrowed Anne Murdock, Sanders' secretary, to help him out. Shortly after, Anne settled at Janet's orderly desk, typed out Eaton's letter so that he commented upon her speed and accuracy, and after he had signed it asked on a sudden impulse: "Shall you be busy this evening, Miss Murdock?"

Anne thought of an engagement with Ted O'Hara, but answered immediately: "No, Mr. Eaton."

"Miss Andrews' illness leaves me in rather a hole," he confided. "I'll arrange things with Mr. Sanders if you can stay and help me for an hour or two."

To work—with the chief! Well, why shouldn't she—permanently? A woman in business had need of every weapon she could employ to hold her job, and the man who controlled the job. Well, if she got this job, thought Anne, she'd hold it!

Chapter III

MISS ANDREWS returned to the office on the following day, perceptibly nervous beneath her air of schooled repression. Eaton, who had worked late the previous evening, remaining long after he had let Anne Murdock go, arrived at the office somewhat later than was his custom, and found Jane at her desk. He spoke to her pleasantly, determined to ignore the scene—and its implications—of the afternoon before.

But she said timidly enough:

"I—I am so sorry about yesterday."

"That's all right," he told her. "I hope your headache is better."

It wasn't. But she had lied mechanically.

"Oh, yes, thank you. But I was worried about the letter to Mr. Goddard."

"Miss Murdock got it out for me."

He went on into his room conscious that after "Miss Murdock" the presence of Miss Andrews was a considerable letdown.

The early morning routine having been disposed of, Janet Andrews drew a deep breath and sat tense and erect at her desk, her thin hands idle, staring at the wall upon which she seemed to see the inevitable handwriting. What a hideous night she had put behind her—hours of endless, sleepless, bitter self-reproach and shame!

Loyalty

Miss Andrews Had Been So Proud of It

She had always prided herself upon her cool, intelligent interest in her work. She had been proud of her business loyalty and integrity, and of Lawrence Eaton's reliance upon her. So the years had passed and slowly, inexorably, by almost imperceptible degrees, she had come to this agonizing self-knowledge that it was not her work but the employer that mattered.

All night she had told herself: "I shall resign. I must!"

But she couldn't face it. Never to see him again! Never to hear his voice! Never to watch the slow, deep smile illuminating the gray eyes! Never again to have the right to mother him a little, to watch over him, to guard him.

She did not appear ridiculous to herself.

She dragged herself back to the office wondering why this devastating thing had come to her. She'd been far too busy all her life to speculate upon her physiologicol and psychological problems. She had read little. Her young womanhood had been spent in caring for and supporting an invalid father. At his death she had adjusted herself to living alone.

No one had advised her of the perils she ran into, the dangers of a starving maternal instinct, the warning signals of her 40 years. She could meet men graciously enough—in business. Socially she was repressed, awkwardly austere. One or two men who might have loved her had come into her life during the period when her father and his demands had constituted a burden she could not drop—or share.

She'd been quite pretty in her twenties; a prettiness of good features, abundant vitality and youth. But her vitality had gone into the job and the youth had passed and the prettiness had faded. She was critical of "smart" clothes in the office, and of cosmetics. She dressed well and plainly, and, as Betty Howard had said, "washed her face" and let it go at that.

She had a few friends, professional women of her own age, some sober plodders like herself, others of a more volatile nature a little impatient of "poor Janet's" incapacity for enjoyment.

Too Pretty

Janet Andrews Had Always Disproved of Anne

Anne Murdock was the youngest friend she had and far the most attractive. Janet disproved of Anne. She thought her too pretty and, erroneously, too "light," for all her alertness, to be in an office.

She should be married to some nice boy, settled in a suburban cottage with a family to rear, and a house to keep, away from the pressure and temptations of the business world. Not that Janet herself had been subjected to temptations! She liked Anne, was even fond of her, scolded her as she might have scolded a dear younger sister, was glad when Anne found time for her.

But today at her desk, staring at the walls, she experienced a sharp stab of jealousy.

Anne was 24. Anne had youth, ambition, beauty and a flashing gayety, a warm ardency of manner. And last night Anne had been with Lawrence Eaton in the quiet office, taking his dictation, finishing her, Janet's, tasks.

No, she could not resign.

But as she was leaving for the day Eaton called her to him.

"I am going to give you a leave of absence, Miss Andrews," he told her quickly but most kindly. "I think you need and deserve a rest. You work hard and your vacations have been inadequate. You will leave us at the end of the week on full pay."

Chance to Rest

Eaton Told Reason for Her Vacation

But the deliberate kindness was disregarded. Her eyes were distended and her mouth shook as she asked hoarsely:

"Does that mean that I am dismissed?"

He answered, wishing to be honest, yet finding her pitiful:

"I hope not. I want you to take six weeks. If at the end of that time you are strong again, quite well——"

He left the sentence unfinished. Yet she felt as if she had watched him sign her death warrant.

She drew nearer, her hands clasped before her in a futile endeavor to still their tremor.

"I'm all right. It was temporary. Please, please don't send me away from you."

She implored, so desperately

CHILD TELLS HOW SHE WAS TAKEN AWAY

Woman Told Her How to Get Out of House, Leaving Door Locked Inside

With a pretty eight-year-old girl as the wondering pivot in the case, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Whitley of Baxter st., Quincy, a childless couple, were arraigned today in Taunton court on a kidnaping charge.

Both pleaded not guilty and each was held in $1000 for a hearing tomorrow.

They are accused of kidnaping Helen Anderson, daughter of Charles C. Anderson of 115 Ingall st., Taunton, a girl whom Mrs. Whitley is declared to have attempted to adopt several times last summer.

The girl was found in their home after disappearing from her own home during her parents' absence.

When found the child informed police that Mrs. Whitley asked her to go with her Saturday night and instructed her how to get out of her father's home, leaving the door locked inside on her younger brother William, whom she was caring for in the absence of her parents.

CHILD GIVES CLUE

When Anderson and his wife returned they found the child missing. The door was locked inside. Police declared William, aged five, could only say that Mrs. Whitley had been to see Helen and that Helen went out of a window and left him alone.

Warrants charging the Whitleys with kidnaping were secured from Clerk of Court Frank T. Lincoln by Chief of Police Merrill D. Aldrich.

CHILD SHOELESS

Patrolman James McNamara of the Quincy police located the Whitleys at 35 Baxter ave., Quincy, and placed them under arrest. The child was found at the home trotting around in her stocking feet.

Mrs. Whitley said she had nothing to do with the kidnaping. She asserted that some one else brought the child to her.

Mrs. Whitley first saw Helen last summer when the child was spending a vacation with her aunt, Mrs. John Chapman of 99 Leonard st., Canton. Mrs. Whitley owned the house in which the Chapmans lived at that time. She later sold the property. She fell in love with Helen at first sight, police declared she told them, and expressed a desire to adopt her after she learned that Helen's mother, the first wife of Anderson, was dead.

Prof. Peabody Talks to Lenten Gathering

Prof. Francis G. Peabody, 83, for 25 years head of the department of Christian ethics at Harvard University, addressed a union meeting of all Boston Protestant ministers today. The gathering was under the direction of the Greater Boston Federation of Churches.

He took a lenten topic and declared in numerous ways and by various illustrations that a completed life does not necessarily mean full rounded years. Completion is really qualitative and not quantitative, he said.

WOBURN SINGS PRAISES OF BOY FIRE HERO

Prevented a Panic Among 300 Children in Theater After Missing Ball Game

One of his keenest disappointments made a hero out of 18-year-old Jerome Lynch, Woburn usher, who averted panic among 300 children during a fire in the Strand Theater, Woburn.

His favorite pastime is baseball, but when the chums of the Woburn High School senior class president went to play baseball yesterday, Lynch could not accompany them because he had to work.

A short time after his chums began chasing flies and swinging bats, young Lynch was in the midst of turmoil in the burning theater. His calm voice and quick actions resulted in all present getting out of the theater without any but minor injuries.

Lynch, in addition to being president of the senior class, is major of the school battalion and with this rank is in charge of school fire drills. Until yesterday, however, he had never been in a fire.

One of five children, the young usher hopes to be able to attend Boston College next year if the family finances can spare some of the help he has been contributing.

Since he was nine, according to his mother, the boy has earned sufficient to buy his own clothing and in the last few years he has been of considerable aid in the household.

RAPS WAR AID FOR OFFICIALS

The revelation that state and federal officials with large salaries are receiving disability compensation from the government resulted today in the passage of a resolution by the Boston city council condemning the practice and calling for a Congressional investigation.

The resolution was introduced by Councillor Herman L. Bush of Dorchester, himself a disabled veteran, and was passed without a dissenting voice under suspension of the rules.

Councillor Lawrence G. Curtis of the Back Bay, who lost a leg in service, in the debate which preceded the vote, protested the resolution on the ground that council should not go into outside matters.

In presenting the resolution Councillor Bush, who lost a leg, eye and finger, said:

"I was very much amazed and shocked at the astounding disclosures relating to the retirement compensation that U. S. Army officers are receiving. It develops that some are receiving as high as $281.25 a month, for very minor disabilities, in fact so minor that the disability is not visible and apparently is of no consequence."

Councillor Bush called attention to the fact that disabled veterans from the ranks get only $100 a month for the loss of both hands, both feet or both eyes. He pointed out that one of the officials whose name was made public is drawing a yearly salary of $8000 and $281.25 a month disability.

ICE CREAM SODA GETS BEAUTIES OFF LINER

Girls Home From Europe; a Parliament Member Here to Study Jobless

The Yankee ice cream soda situation received a substantial boost today when six American misses, just back from Europe, obtained permission to leave the liner Scythia for an hour to absorb suds.

They enjoyed themselves to the utmost in a Washington st. spot while the liner, just in from England, lay over in the Hub before continuing to New York.

The ice cream soda-cravers included Florence Getz, Helen Sommer and Edith Sommer of Peoria; Edith Mansfield of Chicago; Frances J. Naher of Salt Lake City, and Anita Foster of Chicago. They have been studying voice culture in Europe.

STUDIED IN EUROPE

Under direction of their chaperon and teacher, Mrs. Ellen Kinsman Mann of Chicago, the girls made a rapid tour of the Hub after finishing their sodas.

Mrs. Mann, one of the best known voice teachers of Chicago, was formerly of Boston. Her party has been in London, Florence and other centers.

Miss Marjorie Cohen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius J. Cohen of Brookline, arrived on the Scythia after two years of study in London. She was a pupil of Tobias Matthay," noted pianist.

While on board ship Miss Cohen became popular by playing in the ship concert and won the deck tennis championship.

Among those disbarking today was Hon. C. Granville Gibson, conservative member of Parliament. He is on a business trip to Boston, New York, Chicago and other cities. Unofficially, Mr. Gibson is studying the unemployment situation in America.

"In Great Britain," he said, "there are about 1,800,000 unemployed. The dole system is a great boon for the lazy man. He gets about $3 a week, and women get $3.50, with more allowances for children.

PAID FOR RESTING

"I have been told by Socialist leaders that there are between 3,000,000 and 4,500,000 unemployed in the United States. This seems rather high, and I hope to pick up some information while here."

Until a month ago, unemployed in England were required to prove they were at least hunting for work. But now, due to a law passed a month ago, no restrictions are made.

"A man can remain in bed the whole week and draw his dole," said the M. P., "and the only requirements at all is that he must accept employment if offered, although not forced to seek it himself."

Love for Home Keeps Greenblatt in Court

Be it never so humble—home gets Theodore Greenblatt into trouble. Arraigned Saturday on a charge of threatening his wife, Mrs. Lena Greenblatt, of Quincy st., Roxbury, he was sentenced to six months in the House of Correction. When he appealed and got bail, he was ordered to keep away from his wife. Today Greenblatt was again in Roxbury court, charged with having broken into her home Saturday night. There he was arrested in bed on her complaint. This case was continued until tomorrow and Greenblatt held in $500 bail.

Slashed in Face as He Hands Over $10

A mysterious slashing on Beacon st., near Ashburton pl., in which Andrea Overbach, 21, of Prospect st., Lynn, received a disfiguring wound on the face, was reported to the police of the Joy st. station.

Overbach told police he was approached by a man who demanded 10 cents and that to avoid him he walked into a nearby hotel lobby. When he emerged a few minutes later the man followed him and this time demanded $10. Overbach handed over the money and received in return a slash on the side of the face.

Massachusetts Has Oldest Constitution

The Massachusetts Bay Colony charter furnished a foundation for the oldest State constitution in the world—that of Massachusetts—as well as providing the basis for the federal constitution and community charters in this and other lands, declared Gov. Frank G. Allen, who spoke on "The Massachusetts of Today," at the tercentenary service at the First Methodist Church Temple st., last night. Although the colony was unable to pay heavy financial dividends, it paid priceless dividends in civil and religious liberty, he said.

Woman Deserted After Trip to Hub

Police of the Hanover st. station are investigating a story told them by a 23-year-old woman, who described herself at Beatrice Byer of New York. She was found in the North End, and declared that she had been deserted by two men who had taken her on an automobile ride in New York.

She said that she did not know [illegible] reached Boston they deserted her.

Rival Storekeeper Slashed in Brawl

A knife duel in Noyes pl., North End, sent Nicholas Moreno, 39, of Noyes pl., and Luigi Caro, 28, of Endicott st., to Haymarket Relief Hospital. Moreno was slashed on the forehead, and Caro on the right arm. Police say business jealousy [illegible] storekeepers.

Again?

Periodically she suffered, expected to; was virtually an invalid certain days of every month. Then a trained nurse told her the story of Midol. A most marvelous medicine—not a narcotic—that actually ends such pain. Today, the woman who has learned the use of Midol regards the process as an incident! A harmless little tablet acting directly on the organs affected; in five to seven minutes not a twinge of pain remains! Midol is fifty cents, metal case.*

*Midol's comfort is not confined to any certain days or age. It relieves at any time of life. Its ease is felt immediately in cases of nervous headache, backache, cramping, hot flashes and all female pain peculiar to women.

MYSTERY LETTERS OF HARVARD SUICIDE SENT TO NEW YORK HOME

SHOOTING OF KLOUMANN RECALLED

Davis Death Plunge Is Linked With Earlier Tragedy of Hasty Pudding Parties

Mysterious letters received by Dudley Davis, Jr., Harvard honor student who leaped to his death in New York, were seized in his dormitory rooms in Randolph Hall today.

The letters, carefully guarded, were sent to New York and it is understood may be introduced if a coroner's investigation is made into the death of the youth.

Relatives of Davis communicated with Harvard authorities by telephone before the letters were taken and the rooms locked.

Charles Apted, superintendent of the college yard, visited the rooms and questioned other students living in the hall.

It is understood he found no motive for Davis' death plunge in the second tragedy following recent festivities of the Hasty Pudding Club.

PLUNGES TO DEATH

Davis jumped from the fifth floor of his parents' Park ave., New York home early yesterday, while spending his Easter vacation there. On March 22, Asger Kloumann, young Harvard graduate, shot himself in his apartment on the Harvard Grad Coast.

Kloumann's attempt at self-destruction occurred a few hours after the Hasty Pudding Clubs annual costume party, at which Davis and other principals in the club show "Face the Music," were guests.

Kloumann with four students and three girls returned from the costume party to the apartment he shared with Philip Hitchborn, graduate student, and while the others made merry, shot himself in the abdomen. He recovered.

BOTH "DESPONDENT"

Despondency was given as the cause of the action by both young men, although both were popular and apparently in good health and spirits.

Davis, a wrestler and football player had joined the Hasty Pudding Club shortly before the show, and was a frequent visitor to its club rooms. He also visited the rooms of the Spee Club and the Speakers' Club, where he was well liked.

Augustus George Bullock of Worcester, roommate of Davis, had accompanied him to New York, and was asleep when the suicide occurred. He concurred with Maj. Dudley Davis, the young man's father, in denying that the youth had been jilted by a Boston debutante.

Bullock and other friends of Davis said he knew many girls but had no affair with any.

Revolving Beacon and Siren to Control Night Traffic at Boston Airport

The new revolving beacon, of 1,800,000 candlepower, was tested at the Boston Municipal Airport last night. Timed to turn six times a minute, the beacon will be seen by fliers 30 miles away, on a clear night. This is one of the few remaining steps taken by the city to get the airport an A-1-A rating by the Department of Commerce. (Staff photo.)

Traffic on the Boston Municipal Airport will be controlled by means of the siren shown above. A schedule of signals is being worked out by Capt. Albert L. Edson, airport superintendent, shown inspecting the new device. The siren will include warning for all flying to cease while a transport plane arrives or leaves.

POISON LIQUOR PROBE BEGUN BY STATE

Health Commissioner Bigelow Tells of 30 Cases of Rum and "Jakey" Paralysis

Health Commissioner George H. Bigelow announced today that the State Department of Health is investigating the outbreak of paralysis believed to have been caused by poisonous alcohol and Jamaica ginger.

There have been 14 cases reported in Worcester, 13 in Newburyport and three in Westford, while at Lynn police reported the case of one man said to be suffering from paralysis as the result of drinking an automobile anti-freeze solution.

RAIDS IN WORCESTER

Today in Worcester, police made several raids, collecting bottles of Jamaica ginger, bay rum, hair tonic and perfumes for analysis.

The health commissioner said in which no definite cause for the outbreak of paralysis has been found the consumption of liquor may be viewed with unusual suspicion.

LIMBS PARALYZED

The paralysis is of varying degree, the seat involving the lower legs and feet, and at times the wrists and hands. Some cases have already lasted two weeks with no fatalities.

"The symptoms seem to rule out wood and grain alcohol," Dr. Bigelow said. "A search is being made for a higher alcohol of specific toxicity or poisonous constituents other than the alcohols that may be present in the flavoring material."

He said the public can co-operate by calling the department's attention to cases of paralysis and forwarding samples of suspected liquor.

"Silence Is Golden" is truly spoken of beautiful Wave 4d—no name, but they make a lot of attractive Results.

Letters Ask Removal of Commr. Wilson

Editor Boston American:

VIOLATE HUNT LAWS; 4 FINED

For the first time in the history of the Municipal Court a case as could be learned was arraigned today for violating the hunting and trapping laws in failing to make reports at the State House.

Although Judge Dowd professed he had never heard of such a proceeding in local court, some of the men being brought 80 miles by the pound of the case.

Court followers were inclined to believe that many similar cases would follow, as what a precedent had been established, although one of the defendants appealed a fine and the matter may go to the Supreme Court.

EX-TUFTS STAR HELD AS BANDIT

Friends of Sumner R. Cahoon, of Medford, former Tufts football captain, were aghast today at his arrest for the hold up of a Waltham chain store manager and robbery of $300.

Cahoon, now superintendent of a Boston box factory, was arraigned in Waltham court today on a charge of robbery while armed in connection with the holdup of Frank C. Hall, of Webster ave., Newton.

Hall says he is positive the ex-Tufts star is the man who thrust a gun in his face and snatched his money.

Cahoon did not plead today and the case was continued until Thursday. He was released in $5000 bond furnished by friends.

FAMILY LIFE AT FENWAY

THE sunny side of American family life is presented humorously and humanly in "Men Are Like That," the feature at the Publix Fenway. The story revolves around a typical American family and a particularly bumptious son-in-law, a four flusher. Hal Skelley, already a favorite with film audiences since his delightful performance in "The Dance of Life," and "Woman Trap," has the role of Aubrey Piper, originated by George Kelly in his famous play "The Show Off," from which "Men Are Like That" was made.

Doris Hill

Skelly is particularly entertaining in this straight-comedy role. Skelly, the show-off, marries a young girl who puts faith in his bluffing, in spite of the disgusted protests of her family. Disillusioned by married life she still loves him.

Doris Hill, heroine of "The Studio Murder Mystery," is lovely as the girl, and Charles Sellon, Clara Blandick, Morgan Farley, Helene Chadwick, William B. Davidson, Eugene Pallette and George Fawcett are in the cast.

Aileen Pringle and Ian Keith head the clever cast of players and ... for their handling of their roles ... others who do noteworthy work are Fritzi Ridgeway, Gilbert Emery and E. Alyn Warren. Karl Brown deserves special mention for his adroit handling of the screen direction.

Of importance on the Park bill is "A Royal Romance," drama of comedy, love and intrigue. Much of the action takes place in an old baronial hall of a medieval castle. Genuine comedy, a charming love story and thrilling episodes are happily combined. William Collier, Jr., and Pauline Starke have the leading roles.

In addition are several comedy and cartoon talking reels.

FILM SHOWS GOLD RUSH

THAT splendid picture of rugged pioneers and scorching deserts, "The Covered Wagon," opened at the Repertory yesterday. Lois Wilson, Noah Beery and Ernest Torrence achieved their best in this film and it will always remain a monument to their artistry.

The story takes place in the days of '49, the year gold was discovered in Sutter's Creek, California. Thousands of adventurers faced untold hardships in a mad dash to the goldfields.

The second feature is "The Lady Lies," with Walter Huston and Charles Ruggles. This is a superb all-talking picture.

At the Radio Dial

By THE RADIO EDITOR

BELIEVE IT OR NOT RIPLEY takes the air tonight via a national network to broadcast "queeriosities" of the sort that brought him fame. This is the first of a weekly series sponsored by the Beacon Oil Company of Boston. It will be heard on WEEI and other stations of the Red Network, starting at 7:30.

ANOTHER young songbird of the Metropolitan lifts her voice in the General Motors program on the Red Network at 9:30 tonight. This time it is Aida Doninelli, soprano. This musical miss is a native of Guatemala, to which land her family had migrated from Italy. She is the youngest of a family of 14 children. She will sing three or four ditties in addition to the popular bird song from the opera "Pagliacci."

Aida Doninelli

AT TIMES the thin air is more dependable to carry the weight of long-distance communication than is solid copper. Such proved to be the case last night when the New York announcer announced Will Rogers and there was no Will Rogers. Instead, there was a long pause, punctuated with various buzzes. The audience finally learned what it had guessed. There was wire trouble somewhere along the 3000-mile circuit between Hollywood and New York. The studio orchestra filled in for a few minutes, and presently the audience was thrust into the midst of Rogers' soliloquies. His hand was occupied with Lindbergh last night. Particularly Lindbergh's visit to Mexico while Rogers was playing a show there. Praise for the Mexicans for refraining from hot-dogs pending Lindy's delayed arrival and for refraining from tearing his plane to bits for souvenirs filled a good portion of the broadcast time. One or two mild jokes about Lindy's skill with a decrepit Mexican plane and his judging of wind direction from washing hung out on a clothes-line rounded out the national period of homely philosophy.

GRAND OPERA singers will have to watch themselves if they continue to invade the broadcast studio. For some time past radio has been developing a new type of singing technique. This does not rely upon magnitude of lung-power, but on fineness of tone and precision of phrasing. The microphone and the amplifier give the singer the required volume of tone. Last night, Mme. Maria Olszewska, contralto of the Chicago Civic Opera Company, was the soloist of the Atwater-Kent hour. The singer figuratively carried the grand opera stage into the studio with her. She did a couple of operatic numbers with fair success, rising to her greatest height in the famous Flame aria from "Il Trovatore." In her songs, however, she might well have had a few pointers from some of our young radio singers. Notably in two numbers was she disappointing. In the magnificent "Traeume" of Wagner this singer of the German school, panted and roared as though she were going through a Bruennhilde scene. The song is restrained, smooth-flowing, inspired. But not so as interpreted last night. Again, in Brahms' Cradle Song, there were passion and deep intakes of breath which would have sent any cradled infant into convulsions of terror. If opera singers hope to hold their own, and to add to the audience of opera lovers, they must learn radio technique. Broad ef[illegible]

Shopping with Priscilla Price

Dearest Anne:

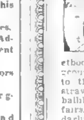
Here's my Easter offering to you—a nest-letter filled with Easter Eggs of Fashion and Fancies. And if you'll open each one carefully you'll find some wonderful news popping out. Don't forget that this week winds up with a grand holiday and we are short a shopping day. So tuck your arm into mine [illegible] shopping I've done.

I'd Be Perfectly Happy

and completely satisfied if I could buy every one of my frocks at the Chic Gown Shop, for then I'd know that I'd be one of the best dressed girls this side of New York, says Patsy. Now that's quite a startling remark, Anne, but she is surely right, for the Chic Gown Shop get all their frocks from New York and you'll find no two alike there. And it seems that for Easter their frocks are even lovelier. Colors, lines and materials that you'd expect to see [illegible] their Special Feature at $16.50. Glorious Black and Opaline prints, Aquamarine Blues, pin dotted chiffons, that I simply can't do justice to with mere words. You've got to see them. They are just what you want—when you "dress in your best for the Easter Parade." The Chic Gown Shop is at 41 Winter St., 5th floor.

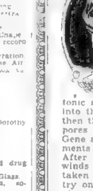
And Now For a Hat!

The "top-off" of your Easter outfit! Patsy was almost ready to "give up" after looking down town, until she dropped in to the Jeanne Hat Shop Saturday evening and found the most wonderful array of hats for every occasion at prices that fit comfortably into every pocketbook. There are some gorgeous hand made hats molded to the head in all the finest straws at $5 and $10—baku, balibuntl, and soft lacy affairs. Then there are some darling ready-mades in the popular straws and styles—Angel Face brims daring flares, and sportsy hats. You'll fall in love with every hat that you see in this charming little shop and the best part [illegible] you can do your shopping in comfortable after-business hours, for the Jeanne Hat Shop is open every evening until 9, Saturdays until 10. It is at 263 Huntington Ave. [illegible] "Tent."



Warm Weather Coming

and of course—your first thought is a permanent wave—but have you considered the condition your hair is in after a winter of tight little hats? There is a simply delightful [illegible] Olive Gene Beauty Salon. First, a good scalp massage, then an invigorating tonic and oil, which seeps deep into the pores of the hair, and then the steam which opens the pores to receive the oil. Olive Gene advises six of these treatments before your permanent. After the awful toll the March winds and April weather has taken of your skin, you ought to try one of their French packs, given by their expert masseur. They give all permanent wave methods and guarantee satisfaction. A wide wave, tight wave or ringlet ends—and the cost is $10. The Olive Gene Beauty Salon, 376 Boylston St., Rm. 400, is now under the management of Mme Gene. Tel Ken 4160.



The Tap-Dancing Rage

which has swept from Hollywood's golden coast is so much better than the 18-day diet for making the pounds disappear that the Paparone Studio of Dancing is one of the most popular spots in town these days. Under the direction of Mr. Leonard Earl Sprague tap-dancing is replacing youthful bouyant grace for those bulky lines, and clicking toes are quickly tapering down thick ankles. Morning club classes may be arranged. Ballet, musical comedy, and eccentric dancing is also taught. You may also learn your tap dancing by mail, if you can't get in town, in a course of 12 lessons also arranged by Mr. Sprague. Write for a catalog. Ballroom dancing is also taught, under the personal direction of Prof. Paparone, at the Paparone Studio of Dancing, 1113 Boylston St. (near Mass. Ave.), Back Bay 3637. Open all Summer.

Pert, Pretty—And Pique

Now the story books tell us Anne, that when a Knight of [illegible] rode into battle, his Ladye Faire fastened [illegible] lance—and that was his amulet. It marked him from [illegible] And so the modern young miss has borrowed this cu[illegible] her from all the rest when she steps into the Easter Parade! But, alas, the modern miss is not so amorous. She pins her flower upon her own lapel! And it is no droopy, delicate posy. It's a stiff [illegible] pert little blossom of pique. What fantastic garden they ha[illegible] cannot tell you, Anne. I only know [illegible] Paris has said "Pique Flowers" [illegible] Filene has imported "Pique Flow[illegible] especially for Easter [illegible] everything but what a natural [illegible] should look like—which is just w[illegible] want. But, what could be smarter w[illegible] the tailored cut of your tweed suit! And where w[illegible] growing white pique violets with pink hearts? New Hosiery, 41 Cents

MacDonnell's has something very new in the way of hosiery. It has been especially designed to give sturdy wear for sports, and everyday use. It is not silk, of course for silk could never give the wonderful service that these stockings give—but a beautiful quality of rayon with a low lustre, and a clarity that makes it almost impossible to tell them from chiffon. You don't need to [illegible] at catching runs in these stockings when strolling along a country road because their price is so low. They are very well fashioned—and have a fine clinging fit. These stockings [illegible] in all the smart spring shades, in sizes 9 to 10½, and I'd advise you to stock up on these before you start your Spring sportstering. MacDonnell's 86 Tremont St., next to the Tremont Temple.

"I'd Love to Go—But

I haven't a party dress!" Dear me, I could have given Patsy a shaking when I heard her refusing an invitation to an after [illegible] doesn't happen to own a dancing frock, for this week Mendelsohn's is closing out a wonderful group of their party frocks at $3. They are slightly used, of course, but a trip to the cleansers will remedy that—and at such a price—$3—who would give up a party! There are taffetas and tulles, satins and laces. If you are having a wedding in your family this Easter—don't forget that Mendelsohn's also have new and used bridal outfits and bridesmaid's costumes for sale and for rent, at very reasonable prices. Mendelsohn's is at 59 Temple Place, 5th floor.

Permanent Perfection

Why let a few straggly ends stand between you and a good time on the holiday week-end, when you can have a permanent wave at Lillian Cunninghams this week, and drive hatless through the country in sunshine or showers—knowing that your newly waved ringlets will only become more beguiling. What a Glorious Feeling when your friends exclaim—[illegible] half [illegible] That [illegible] when your hair has its rich youthful coloring, and your [illegible] youthful freshness. So if you want to arrest the appearance of those first grey hairs, without getting that "touched up" look, just try Ann MacHale's Hair Color Restorer, ($1). You can buy all these preparations at the S. S. Pierce stores.

The Unpardonable Hair

that grows on your lips—on your chin between your eyebrows—everywhere, in fact, that you don't want it to, and simply will not stay covered up with powder or plucked by tweezers, can be banished permanently by one electric needle expert whom everyone enjoys visiting. She is our friend Miss Elizabeth G. Sparkes. Every moment of her time is devoted conscientiously to you while you are having your treatment, and every tiny little hair that she goes after with her sure, deft hands, is sure to be exiled forever. If you could see the perfect relaxation her patrons enjoy during her treatments you'd be convinced that her work is perfectly painless. Elizabeth G. Sparkes, 120 Tremont St., Rm. 331, Han. 7592.

To Resign Gracefully

DEAR MRS. BEECHMAN:

In your letter [illegible] it is better to give the reason or reasons for your resignation. Then your letter could read something like this:

Mrs. A. M——,

Dear Mrs. M——:

I am sorry that because of my added duties in my profession I find that my time will not permit me to enjoy the privilege of being a member of our club and so I am sending you herewith my resignation. Please know how deeply I regret the necessity of having to resign, for I have had special pleasure and benefit from my membership, and I have enjoyed more than I can say the friendship of the other gracious members.

The Office Wife -:- By Faith Baldwin

unhappy that she did not realize what she was saying.

Eaton felt ashamed, curiously humiliated, as if he had received a wound in the spirit through the sword of revelation. And at the same time being masculine he was angry. At all events, her attitude settled things. He said firmly:

"You see, Miss Andrews, how quickly you become upset? I am not sending you away. I am giving you a leave of absence with a good chance to recover your health and return to us."

In another moment she would cry. She knew it and he knew it. She said:

"Thank you," in a low tone, and walked back to her office.

By some stupendous feat of will she managed to get her things together and to crawl, nearly home to the little flat. She'd seen this sort of thing happen before to other women: the tactful granting of leave . . . Well, in six weeks' time she'd be looking for another job.

When she left at the end of a terrible week the fiction was kept up between her and Eaton.

The work! She wanted to know when she was saying good-by to him. Good-by, she thought, didn't means God be with you. But it seemed that He had ceased to be with her.

"I've arranged with Mr. Sanders to borrow Miss Murdock for the time being," he answered.

So she had that to take home with her, the definite knowledge of her supplanting.

When she was gone Eaton had time to think about her with anger, for the love of a woman he doesn't want affects a man in one of two ways according to his character and the quality of his vanity. Or pride. He [illegible] affords him smugness, complacency, and a [illegible] or it annoys him. It had annoyed Eaton. Yet he thought he understood, for he knew better than most men the dangers of repression, the bursting of carefully-builded dams.

To Anne Murdock he said briefly:

"Mr. Sanders will let me have you for the duration of Miss Andrews' absence."

Anne looked up and smiled. To mind banished Miss Andrews, and Does that mean that I am dismissed?" Janet asked hoarsely. Eaton had just told her [illegible] six weeks' leave of absence in which to recover her health—she was near collapse.

[illegible]

"You won't be able to keep me out of your office while Miss Murdock's with you. She carries 10,000 details of my work in her head that I can't be bothered with. So don't crab if you see me coming in half a dozen times a day."

"I'm sorry, Sandy, and come as often as you want. But I must have competent assistance with this Marsten business and as far as I can see Miss Murdock is the only person who'll fill the bill at present. Miss Andrews will [be] back, you know," he added, with no conviction.

[illegible]

How Janet Andrews accepted the six weeks' leave of absence forced upon her by her employer and how his attention soon became centered upon Anne Murdock whom Janet had always disliked is thrillingly told in tomorrow's instalment of this greatest of modern business romances.

THE MEN GIRLS DON'T FORGET

"AND now will you please tell us what kind of men women like?" writes H—— R——. "I hope that's not too big an order."

It IS a pretty large order. Because, like most women, I have spent most of my life trying to find out what MEN like. That is a more profitable study for any woman and a far easier one than the psychology of the restless sex.

Nobody can tell what makes a woman love a man, not even the woman herself. No woman loves a man just because he is good or handsome or successful, or even because he is in love with her. Neither does she love him because he is brilliant or wise or learned, or because he is weak or wild or appealing. She can [illegible]

BUT—all women like a modest man, the kind who does not try to grab the center of the stage and turn the limelight on himself. The kind who is willing to "star" the woman. A conceited man or an egotist must be either a hero or an Adonis to get by with women. Lindbergh and the Prince of Wales must have the irresistible charm of modesty, which makes young women sigh for them and older women croon over them.

Women like quiet, reserved men. Not the gum[my], gloomy, morose or cynical kind. But even the cynic is preferable to the [illegible] the wisecracker, the [illegible] talker or the life of the party. No woman can feel any real romance for a clown.

Women like a masterful man. Not a bully or a caveman or a roughneck, but a man who knows his own mind and does not let any woman bully him. There is nothing before which the feminine heart crumples so quickly as masculine strength, mental, physical or moral.

YET women [illegible] Not necessarily one who [illegible] for silk hats and a high polish and always uses the right spoon, but one who knows how to be tender and [illegible] and protecting. Even the most [illegible] woman likes to lean [illegible] a selfish [illegible] a better man [illegible] at the [illegible] moment.

WOMEN admire a clean-cut, well-set-up man. Handsome [illegible] groomed [illegible]

You SEE [illegible] women [illegible] men. That [illegible] made them different [illegible]

Do You Know That —

Girls who work in Japanese mills receive on an average the equivalent of $15 a month in wages.

It takes 50,000 rosebuds to make one ounce of the oil of roses.

When Christians were being driven out of Asia Minor during the war a mother branded the shoulder of her baby son. She were parted. Now after 14 years they have been reunited as a result of that scar.

A peculiar custom in the Canary Islands is that a young man may not enter the house of the girl he is courting. The girl may sit at the window to receive his attentions, but he must stand outside.

Among the stricter Egyptians women are not allowed to go to the movies, the film audiences in Cairo being composed of men, with occasionally a few European women.

A clergyman in England may still refuse to marry a man to a deceased wife's sister.

STOCK MARKET SEES NEW TOPS FOR YEAR SET

By STANLEY W. PRENOSIL

New York, April 14 (AP)—Stock market figured prepared to buy, ran into a moderate volume of selling in the morning and then lunged upward in the early afternoon.

In the early decline stocks of all sorts dropped 1 to as much as 5 points, and a combination of profit-taking and bear selling put offerings on the market in such volume that turned upward under the impetus of the farm implement, Farmers Corporation, Radio and a number of other issues.

TELEPHONES AT HIGH

[illegible] American Telephone was run up nearly 8 points to a new high peak price at 274½. Electric Power and Light was again heavily bought, selling more than 3 points above last week's final quotation. International Telephone crossed 77 to a new high for a gain of nearly 3 points.

American Tobacco issues jumped about 7 a point each to new highs for the year. Mathieson Alkali, R. H. Macy, National Air Transport, Lehman Corporation, Missouri Kansas Texas, United Aircraft, Auburn Auto, Celotex and New York Dock all sold 3 to 5 points higher, several of them reaching new peak.

Low-priced stocks were most in favor in the late afternoon and advances of one to two points to new highs for the year were made by numerous issues including Gimbel Bros. Hahn Department Stores, Aviation Corp., Grigsby-Grunow, International Paper "C" and Oliver Farm Equipment.

Trading was the dullest in several weeks and the ticker kept well abreast of the market into the final hour. The close was steady.

French Government Honor Paid Kreuger

Paris, April 14—The most notable tribute ever paid to a private financier was accorded to Ivar Kreuger, guiding genius of Kreuger & Toll, Swedish Match Co., International Match Corp. and other large organizations, by the French finance minister during the Senate's second sitting of April 8, recorded in the "Journal Officiel," just received. While discussing Germany's reparations payments under the Young plan, the minister commented on Kreuger's compliance with the Allies' appeal to place the payments for his $125,000,000 loan on an equal basis with Allied reparation payments, "thereby making possible The Hague agreement."

Speaking of Mr. Kreuger, the minister said: "To this most interesting figure of international finance the entire press of his country—from Socialist to conservative—have just rendered on the occasion of his 50th birthday honors the unanimity of which would ordinarily surprise us. But when one knows what he has done for the peace of Europe one understands why all classes of opinion in this country have united in this tribute of gratitude."

General Trend Toward Mild Improvement

Large-Scale Building Is Helping Employment; Mergers Coming

—By B. C. FORBES—

NEW YORK, April 14—Mid-April finds employment increasing, agricultural prices more steady, business inclined to perk a little, Wall Street hesitating to mark up quotations farther until it has been clearly established that industry is headed definitely upward.

B. C. Forbes.

Sentiment, outside of stock market circles, continues to become gradually more cheerful.

Just as different divisions of the stock market have now frequently moved in opposite directions, so industries are moving sharply irregularly.

The oil industry is perhaps entitled to first mention among those exhibiting betterment and giving promise of still further betterment. Leading operators are now more disposed to co-operate in keeping down over-production and in naming reasonable prices. Prospects, although still beset by some uncertainties, are distinctly brighter than at any time in several years. Incidentally, several mergers of great magnitude are planned, subject to approval by the authorities.

Motor manufacturers feel warranted in increasing production quite substantially. The assumption now is that sales will prove more satisfactory than was anticipated a month or two ago. The next six weeks will tell the story. The probability is that as goes the motor industry so will general prosperity during 1930.

Large-scale construction has begun to expand very encouragingly. Many of the projects outlined in the Hoover conference are now being launched.

The steel industry continues moderately active, although prices are bearish. Railway buying has diminished because of the disappointing volume of freight moved thus far this year and of the anxiety of railway managements to make the best possible showing in the way of net earnings.

In most other industrial fields improvement is not yet pronounced. Reports that the 18-cent copper level is becoming untenable were energetically circulated in Wall St. last week. The cotton and woolen industries are still quiet. The leather industry shows little recuperation. Retail trade reports are spotty, but Easter buying may lift the April figures to acceptable totals. Commercial and bank failures are unpleasantly heavy. Dividend reductions figure unpleasantly often in the news. Bank statistics supplement railway statistics in emphasizing that general activity still runs quite a bit behind a year ago, when things were booming.

Stocks moved erratically all through the week. They ended slightly lower every day with the exception of Wednesday, when there were spectacular demonstrations by pools in several prominent issues. Pools have multiplied and have been unusually active. Not only have standard stocks occasionally been marked up rapidly, but minor issues have been taken in hand here and there and run up sensationally.

In the highest financial circles strong-arm methods by bull pools are not encouraged. The feeling is that the stock market has already moved ahead of the business procession sufficiently far for the time being and that it would be better not to attempt to excite wild speculation at this time.

The prevailing opinion still is, however, that the general trend in industry, in business, in employment and in stocks will be moderately upward during the balance of the year, especially if agricultural prices do not suffer another relapse.

* * *

Intimations are frequently heard that the Federal Reserve Board will strive to bring about still lower rediscount rates in order to pave the way for the flotation here of reparation bonds. Such action is improbable and not wholly desirable. Funds are cheap enough for speculative purposes and it is questionable if lower rates in Wall Street would have any important influence upon lenders for business purposes throughout the country. That money will remain plentiful in leading financial centers during the year is taken for granted.

Speedy disposal of the tariff would be welcomed. Wall Street hardly believes that President Hoover will veto the measure finally laid before him, unsatisfactory though the "limited revision" admittedly has been.

Merger announcements of unusual importance are expected in the very near future.

CONVERTIBLES LEADERS IN BOND SALES

By JOHN L. COOLEY

New York, April 14 (AP)—Investment bonds retained their recent dullness at the opening of the new week today. The large turnovers and the principal price changes were all in the convertible descriptions, while investment mortgages fluctuated in a half-point range without a definite trend.

The two telephone convertibles gave the market most of its action in the earlier trading. American 4½s advanced about 3 points and International 4½s crossed 129 to a new high for the year, both on substantial buying orders. There was a mild flurry in the amusement section, General Theaters 6s and Pathe 7s rising a point or so on the first few sales.

The usual assortment of small gains and losses in the general list disclosed general firmness in issues of the higher ratings. Moderate dealings in Rock Island 4½s, Pennsylvania 4½s, Wabash 5½s, Missouri Pacific 5s, American Telephone 5s of 1960 and Utah Power & Light 5s brought out conservative advances. Berlin City Electric 6½s traded actively, apparently reflecting the expected new financing. Finland 6s, Japan 6½s, Rhine-Westphalia 6s with warrants and a few other foreign bonds claimed some attention in this generally firm group. United States governments were quiet and steady.

ELECTRIC BOND AT NEW HIGH

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER

New York, April 14 (AP)—The curb market entered the new week in a hesitant mood today. Operations for the advance were again pressed forward in some of the utilities and specialties, but gains were maintained with difficulty.

Many traders were inclined to stand aside until the selling movement which developed last week definitely spend itself.

Electric Bond & Share was pushed up moderately into new high ground for the year.

United Light & Power A continued its advance, reaching the best levels of the year. Bullish operations in American Superpower, however, met with considerable resistance.

Hydro Electric and Brazilian Traction eased in sympathy with declines in those shares on the London market. Niagara Hudson was firm. In the natural gas issues, Memphis was rushed up more than 4 points to a new high at the opening, then ran into profit taking. The United Gas issues were again sluggish.

Brown Fence, a comparatively inactive issue of late, was a buoyant feature of the industrials, running up nearly 10 points to a new top in moderate trading. Dresser Manufacturing A was also in good demand, reaching new top territory.

Deere new stock was pushed up more than 4 points, then lost its gain.

Among the low-priced issues, Utah Radio was a firm spot, rising about a point to a new 1930 peak. Fox Theaters A, American Cyanamid B and Newmont eased.

Oils were dull and inclined to sag, Indiana and Cities Service selling off fractionally. Cosden and Gulf were firm in the early trading, but soon turned dull.

Dissolving of Sugar Agency Is Expected

Havana, April 14 (AP)—A meeting has been called today for definite decision on the fate of the Co-operative Exports Agency, which has been under fire several months by sugar growers.

President Machado has demanded that stockholders of the agency either vote for dissolution or for retention with government backing. It was understood today that the organization likely would be dissolved. This would mean unhampered sales, and unrestricted growing and grinding of sugar cane.

Providence Plans Bond Redemption

Providence, R. I., will redeem on May 1 the $1,513,000 bonds falling due on that date. Bonds include an issue of $913,000 water refunding loan, $300,000 sewer and $300,000 highways.

Plans are now being completed for city to sell $2,000,000 bonds in lots of $500,000 each for sewer, highway, public service and hospital loans. Council will pass on this issue on Thursday next, after which time full details will be available.

Power Plant Afloat to Operate Along Coast of Maine

New England Public Service Co. is proceeding with a novel feature of its 1930 plans, the creation of a floating power plant. The company has negotiated for a steamship which it intends to convert into a mobile electric station which can be moved from place to place to serve coast industries at points where sufficient power facilities are not now available and which are seasonable in nature. This plant will represent an investment of about $75 per horsepower, against around $125 for ordinary steam stations.

Receipts of lead in ore by United States and Mexican smelters aggregated 70,381 short tons (2000 pounds) in February against 68,593 tons in January and 73,934 tons in February, 1929, according to the American Bureau of Metal Statistics.

Total stocks of lead in the United States and Mexico amounted to 140,845 tons on March 1, against 149,403 tons on February 1 and 160,597 tons on March 1, 1929.

A total of $260,000,000 was spent for newspaper advertising in 1929, says bureau of advertising of American Newspaper Publishers Association.

The automobile industry showed the largest volume of expenditures with twenty-three manufacturers of cars and trucks paying $64,245,000.

Nineteen twenty-nine was a record year for newspaper advertising, some classifications showing lineage increases ranging from 25 per cent to 80 per cent.

TELEPHONE HAS EARNINGS UP

American Telephone & Telegraph Co. reports for the quarter ended March 31 net earnings after all charges of $40,439,855 compared with $40,500,765 in the same three months a year ago. Although total revenues were more than $6,200,000 greater than in the initial quarter of a year ago, the balance available for dividends was a few thousand smaller due to increased expenses and to a $3,000,000 increase in interest charges.

On the average amount of stock drawing dividends in the first quarter the earnings were equal to $2.94 a share compared with $3.32 a share in the first three months of 1929.

Income account for the first quarter of this year compares with 1929 as follows:

Car Registrations Reach 22,599,701

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors, says:

"According to a compilation of the official state registration figures at the close of 1929, the total number of passenger cars in use in the United States was 22,599,701, of which 6,356,901 were of General Motors manufacture. In this connection, and as emphasizing the growth of the industry, it is interesting to note that ten years ago there were only 6,471,000 passenger cars of all makes in use in this country."

Scientific Progress Points Toward Bright Future for Chemical Industry

RAPID RECOVERY SHOWN BY BIG INDUSTRIAL GROUP

By IRVING FISHER
Professor of Economics, Yale University

New Haven, Conn., April 14—There seems to be ample reason for the rapid recovery of stock prices in the Chemical group, due to expectation of great future earnings in this field from applied science and inventions.

Irving Fisher

It is perhaps not generally known that the chemical industry in the United States, from the standpoint of assets, has grown in the last decade to the point where it holds second place among the groups of industrial corporations.

Probably income tax returns for 1929 will show over $14,000,000,000 of assets for this industry. Mr. E. M. Allen, president of the Mathieson Alkali Works, has estimated that sales of chemicals and allied substances by domestic producers in 1929 exceeded $10,000,000,000; that the value of products in the field of chemical and allied industries would reach $4,400,000,000 in 1930; that imports would reach $240,000,000; and that exports would be $230,000,000.

Probably in no industry has such a tremendous amount of money gone into research during the past ten years, nor have such tangible benefits accrued from proportionate investment elsewhere. Pure as well as applied science has contributed, and in the train of discoveries and adaptations made have come a multitude of benefits to industry and agriculture.

BENEFITS OF RESEARCH

Among them are the mechanical liquefaction of air and production of oxygen, nitrogen, argon and other constituent gases therefrom; butanol and acetone, which are widely used in the manufacture of celluloids, lacquers, photographic films, patent leather, auto finishes, airplane waterproof "dope," glass and bronze articles, furniture and varnish making, oil refining, manufacture of dyes, drugs, artificial silk and textiles. These two invaluable chemicals, butanol and acetone, have come into general use during the past decade. It was butanol, in fact, which contributed largely to the mass production of motor cars, eliminating the necessity of large inventories of finished cars in paint shops, since it made possible a quick-drying lacquer which could be sprayed on with a "gun."

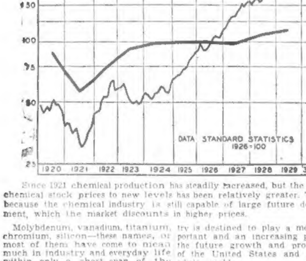
trolled by German nationals in America.

But, whatever may have been the justice or injustice of this action, it can be fairly said that the United States has supplied the best of its talent and brains to bringing this important industry further along a path of everwidening usefulness. Meanwhile, the I. G. Farbenindustrie Corporation, a tremendous German undertaking, with 154,600 employes at the close of 1928, has been working under agreements with the DuPont interests and the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey. It has given evidence of the recrudescence of Teutonic ingenuity and resourcefulness in such new departures as the production of oil from coal by the process of pumping hydrogen into it; the hydrogeneration process whereby crack residue and heavy oils are treated to give a greater gasoline yield; the development of a drug which is a preventive of malaria and non-inflammable film. From the close alliance with companies in this country has grown an American subsidiary, known as the I. G. Chemical Corporation. Some of its directors are Edsel Ford, W. C. Teagle of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey; Charles E. Mitchell of the National City Bank of New York; and Paul M. Warburg of the International Acceptance Bank.

FAVOR CHEMICALS

Over a long period of years the American people has seen tremendous expansion first in one industrial group, then in another. From the Civil War until the turn of the century, the railroads had their greatest development. Then came steel. The automobile industry followed. Since the European war perhaps the rate of growth has been greatest in the spheres, respectively, of motor cars, aeroplanes, power companies, and chemicals. Taking their cue from advances in applied science, powerful, far-sighted syndicates underwrite and develop each industry as it shows signs of going into its period of greatest growth.

At the December business survey conference at Washington sponsored by President Hoover, the new capital expenditure of the chemical industry for 1930 was expected to reach $360,000,000, of which $275,000,000 would be devoted to industrial chemical works. Regardless of tariff uncertainties, and business recession, the industry goes forward, with the financial condition of most of the companies extremely sound and large cash balances which may be applied to further research without resort to flotation of great blocks of securities. The chemical industry is destined to play a most important and an increasing part in the future growth and prosperity of the United States and of the whole world.



Since 1921 chemical production has steadily increased, but the rise of chemical stock prices to new levels has been relatively greater. This is because the chemical industry is still capable of large future development, which the market discounts in higher prices.

Molybdenum, vanadium, titanium, chromium, silicon—these names, or most of them have come to mean much in industry and everyday life within only a short span of the post-war days. Their development has been rapid and widespread. Other smaller but nevertheless important applications of the fruits of research have been nitro-cellulose containers, which are transparent and resilient; sheets of the same material for display packaging on retail counters; pyroxalin lacquer, artificial leather, and various synthetic organic chemicals.

GENIUS CONTRIBUTES

The beneficiaries of these developments are many and varied; they range from manufacturers of glass, ceramics, rayon, paint, paper, explosives, films and motor cars, to the farmer who benefits from improved cheaper synthetic fertilizer, and the manufacturers of perfumes.

Many question the degree by which the United States benefited from the European war. There is a pro and a vigorous con as to the ethical aspect of our taking possession of the plants and patents of the chemical and dyestuff industries theretofore owned and con-

Diversification of product has been one of the noticeable trends of industry. This is nowhere better illustrated than in the automobile parts and accessories industry. Professor Fisher discusses this phase in a forthcoming article or this paper.

Investment Trust Idea in Royalties

New York, April 14—J. Edward Jones, oil producing royality operator, announces the formation of a royalty trust in which is inaugurated several absolutely new features in the ownership of oil producing royalties.

Through a trustee, Bank of America National Association, participation trust certificates are offered in amounts of $500 and multiples thereof, in series of $100,000 against a number of oil producing royalties deposited with the trustee.

The trustee, monthly, will distribute pro rata to holders of the trust certificates income, profits and proceeds of the various properties in trust. It becomes possible for royalty holders through this means to secure the benefit of broad diversification without large individual holdings.

Harbor Commuters Swell Ranks

Business Men Purchase Craft for Speedy Trip to Office

If you want to be up-to-date, you will join the new "harbor commuters' club."

During recent weeks scores of Boston business men have bought motor boats for commuting in and out of the harbor to their work.

The boating enthusiasts make short and long trips to Hull and points beyond. There are no "service" delays if the commuter knows how to handle his engine.

No name has been chosen for this group, which is expected to become a semi-social organization. At present anyone who commutes by water is a member, in the same sense that all who fall off a horse are members of the Prince of Wales Club, or all who jump by parachute are in the Caterpiller Club.

This commuting is providing a noticeable impetus for the motor boat industry of Boston, which this year expects its biggest business in a decade.

Longshoreman's Gazette

CARL MORRISON, Editor

Vol. 1 No. 5

Folks, we want you to meet the new staff of this little newspaper. Davy Jones has consented to serve as honorary editor, which settles our dispute as to his prior editorship.

The staff consists of:
Editor ....Carl F. Morrison
Features....C. Francis Morrison
Fish news..........C. F. Morrison
Ship arrivals.......Carl Morrison
Cub reporter.."Scoop" Morrison
Office boy...C. Leslie Morrison

The editor can personally vouch for each member of his staff. Assignments were made today. The feature writer will continue to tell of superstitions of Boston seamen, while the cub will dig out little items about hobbies of harbor people. The editor-in-chief will keep firing at the aim of arousing public consciousness in the port.

As the office boy is less than three days old, he possesses the requisite knowledge to be an ideal office messenger. At least, he can't talk back.

Says Uncle Sam

A war department map, for the year 1926, came in the mail today. Uncle Sam in this document points out a comparison of shipments from the U. S. to Hamburg, Germany, with imports from that city. Boston is third of all Atlantic ports, second only to New York and Philadelphia. That year Boston imported 52,606 tons from Hamburg, but kept the score more than even by shipping 67,382 tons to that city.

Today's Superstition

The feature man turned in this item as today's number in the daily series of superstitions of Boston sailors. To bring on a breeze, all that is believed necessary is to stick a knife in the foremast. The blade should point in the general direction of desired wind.

Tomorrow the writer promises to tell about "hexers" or male-witches on ships.

The Secret Is Out

We have found out why the tailor of George P. Tilton, of the Port Authority office, is complaining about cracker crumbs in Mr. Tilton's pockets. We had lunch with him (dutch treat) and saw him furtively stuff his pockets with packages of oyster crackers left over from his stew.

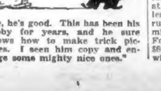
"I save them for the pigeons," he confessed.

The Cub Gets Going

Like all newspapers, the Longshoreman's Gazette is afflicted with a cub reporter. This is how he wrote his second in his series of articles about harbor people and their hobbies:

"When T. E. C. Robinson gets awful tired o fbeing a good clerk in the comptroller's office, he can get a big job as a photographer.



Gee, he's good. This has been his hobby for years, and he sure knows how to make trick pictures. I seen him copy and enlarge some mighty nice ones."

News of Other Ports

Philadelphia, which is making a Chamber of Commerce survey to inaugurate direct transatlantic freight and passenger service and thus steal business from New York and Boston, is on the job. A report for last month by the ocean traffic bureau manager told of increases in exports. Soliciting industries in the Middle West yielded a considerable volume of business for South America and one very large export order for India. This promotion work is something similar to the hopes of Mayor Curley, for increasing Boston exports.

WORKER KILLED BY L BUS

After turning a switch outside the carhouse at Fields Corner, Dorchester, Patrick J. Dolan of 51 Hanson st., Somerville, an "El" employe, was struck and killed early today by an incoming bus, said to have been operated by Bernard J. Nolan of 75 Berkeley st., Boston.

Struck a terrific blow on the head by the front part of the bus, Dolan was unconscious when picked up. He died on the way to City Hospital in a police ambulance.

The accident happened at an hour when the carhouse approach was deserted. The bus was empty, save for the driver, who was held for questioning at the Fields Corner police station.

Income Tax Injustice

No Relief for Wage-Earners

THE founders of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts wrote the first and probably the best Constitution ever devised by man.

They had thrown off the tyranny of taxation without representation and the ideal of honest taxation was high in their minds. They provided in this historic Constitution that taxes in this Commonwealth should always be "proportional." They meant by it that taxes should be equitable and just.

But the taxation system of Massachusetts today, far from what the fathers intended, is neither honest nor just.

Our income tax law may have worked out to the interest of rich holders of intangible personal property who can conspire devious means to conceal that form of property from taxation and who, if they could not conceal it, would pay a light tax upon as much as was uncovered by the tax collectors.

It has resulted in throwing the burden of taxation which these men should bear upon the shoulders of real estate owners and the earners of small incomes. This scheme has penalized real estate development. It has promoted high rents. It has penalized home-owning. It has penalized the ambition of the wage-earner and the professional man to increase their income by hard work.

As the cost of government notoriously increased the burdens fell heavier and heavier upon the two classes which were made the victims of injustice.

The home-owner CANNOT HIDE HIS HOUSE in the ground when the assessor arrives. Nor can the wage-earner conceal the report of his wages which his employer sends to the State House. THEY PAY.

State expenditures were $28,000,000 annually when the income-tax law was passed. In ten years they had jumped to $50,000,000. Municipal expenditures had increased from $108,000,000 to $219,000,000 and have since mounted. So it goes all down the line, or, rather, all up the line until "on all sides is heard the cry that the burden of taxation is becoming unbearable, and relief is demanded through governmental action."

To meet these costs the taxes on real estate were forced from $93,000,000 to $209,500,000 in a ten-year period. The valuation of buildings was increased 83 per cent; the valuation of land 30 per cent; the valuation of real estate 58 per cent and the number of persons assessed increased 32 per cent. The last included very largely those who were caught by the levy on earned incomes.

The intangible property wealth of Massachusetts is estimated to be three times the value of the property and income wealth which cannot be hidden from taxation. Yet three-quarters of the wealth contributes less than nine per cent of the tax revenue. ONE-FOURTH PAYS THROUGH THE NOSE. IT PAYS SIXTY-FIVE PER CENT OF THE $275,000,000 raised by direct taxation annually in this Commonwealth.

The rate of one and one-half per cent which the earners of small incomes are compelled to pay is utterly unwarranted. It is higher than most of the States of this country which have at any time felt there was any justice whatsoever in taxing those least able to bear it.

Nor should the impressive fact be lost sight of that the exemptions to married men and their families HAVE REMAINED STATIONARY during the years that the tax on earned incomes has been in existence. If wages have gone up, the cost of living has made an increase, too. The wage-earners' margin of profit may not have been higher. BUT HIS CONTRIBUTION IN TAXES HAS STEADILY INCREASED.

There is now much ado in the Legislature about this whole subject of taxes.

The obvious inequalities upon the earner of income should be erased.

The tax upon small incomes, upon those least able to bear it, should be eliminated.

Failing in that, the Legislature should reduce the rates and increase the exemptions.

The Legislature could well take a leaf from the book of Calvin Coolidge.

For Police Commissioner

One Strong Man All That Is Needed

AND now it is proposed that the important Police Department of Boston shall be directed by a Commission of three members—one to be chosen by the Governor, one by the Mayor and the third, if they fail to agree, by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

Why not drag in the Fence Viewer and the Harbor Master and let them have a hand in this selection?

The proposal has merit only to the extent that it recognizes that the condition in Boston is indefensible under Commissioner Wilson and must be changed.

There is no democratic reason whatsoever why the Governor or the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court should have any authority in the choice of a director of Boston's police force.

The suggestion is entirely at variance with the seasoned convictions of eminent students, such as Lord Bryce, for example, who decided after an examination of Massachusetts' governmental structure that the best government is attained in units closest to the source of all authority—the public.

That the Supreme Court would be pulled into a political muddle would be certainly viewed with alarm by those who have respect for the theory of independence of the three branches of government as well as by those who profess to see in the Court a sanctity which should not be dimmed by politics.

The Police Department of Boston should be administered by a single Commissioner. Mr. Wilson is the only one who has confessed that the job is too big for one man. He should make way for a man for whom the job is not too big.

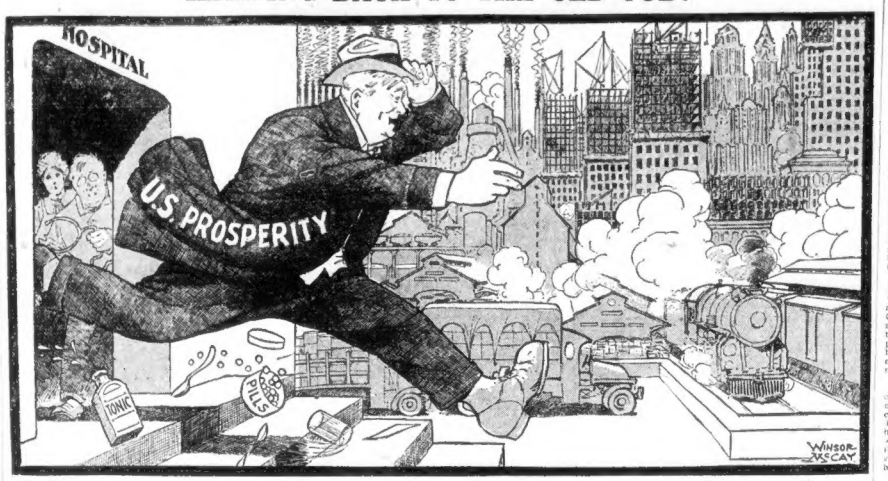
The Boston Evening American is not ready to admit that nowhere in Boston is there a man big enough to take charge of the police department, and run it as it should be done. Such an admission would not only be untrue, but it would be an uncalled for reflection on the manpower of Boston.

There are a dozen men in the city capable of reorganizing the police department and maintaining a high standard of honesty and efficiency.

The department should be run by one man, not by a convention.

And the Commissioner should be appointed by the Mayor of Boston. Otherwise, there is not home rule.

HEADING BACK TO THE OLD JOB!



"GANGWAY!"

And like a new man packed full of pep, Prosperity, who has been on the ailing list for some months, plunges out from the Depression Hospital and is ready to tackle his old job again.

And the nation greets him with open arms and puts him at work.

Whistles shriek and sirens sound, bells are tolled and the welkin rings with wild hurrahs because this boy is popular in this country. He is acclaimed wherever he goes.

Kindly note that he has thrown away the tonic bottle and the pill box. Of them he has no need.

All he asks is a chance to go to work.

Let's help him take off his coat and roll up his sleeves!

Get the Bigger Ones

Real Goal in Garrett Case

WHETHER Former District Attorney O'Brien dodged a conference with Former Governor Fuller is an obscure and immaterial feature which should not serve to distract attention from the more serious business of uncovering the grafters who have fattened on Boston Police Department operations.

The really important duty is of restoring the morale of a department which has been impaired by inefficiency and corruption.

Graft existed in the department during the time that Mr. Fuller was Governor and Mr. O'Brien was District Attorney. They both are out of office.

It flourished during the incumbency of Herbert A. Wilson as Police Commissioner and that he made no effective effort to eliminate it is now a matter of record. He is still in office.

Mr. Wilson should resign the position which HE ADMITS IS TOO BIG FOR HIM and thus make way for a man for whom it is not too big.

The Legislature should authorize the Mayor of Boston to appoint the Commissioner and thus restore the principle of home-rule to the metropolis.

Meanwhile, unaffected by political factors, the investigation should continue to explore all the ramifications of corruption.

Mere exposure of minor police officers will not suffice. If the policemen have been the agents and pawns of a powerful gang behind the scenes, let the investigation expose that gang and thus break its hold upon the department.

The production of satellites who, for a small fee, would confess guilt of the crimes actually committed by their superiors—it is called "taking the rap"—is a serious form of collusion, the authors of which ought to be exposed before this investigation is completed.

Conry on the Job

Believes Motorists Are Well-Meaning

HON. JOSEPH A. CONRY has begun his task as Traffic Commissioner of the City of Boston with an understandable and intelligent discussion of the problem which could have been expected from him.

He estimates that ninety-five per cent of the motorists are sincere, well-meaning person, who would not willingly jeopardize life and are eager to comply with sensible rules and regulations.

The other five per cent, who expose life and property to danger, are the willful ones who will have to be handled with summary firmness.

Mr. Conry's job is no mean one in a metropolis of narrow streets into which the traffic of New England pours in a constant stream.

Mr. Conry is an exemplar of the spirit of home rule for which Mayor Curley and the people of Boston have been striving. He is the first city official of prominence to be selected by the Mayor without resort to the approving hand of a State Commission which is not responsible to the people of Boston and whose interest in and knowledge of Boston is only cursory.

His long record in the public service and his character contain ample indication that he will meet the test.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

The eyes of our souls only then begin to see when our bodily eyes are closing.—Law.

Cunning pays no regard to virtue, and is but the low mimic of wisdom.—Bolingbroke.

Age is not a decay; it is the ripening, the swelling, of fresh life within, that withers and bursts the husky. —MacDonald.

It is always in season for old men to learn. —Aeschylus.

Badness of memory every one complains of, but nobody of the want of judgment. — La Rochefoucauld.

Listen, World!

—By ELSIE ROBINSON—

NIX ON PEDESTALS!

WE'RE always condemning people because they don't come up to our ideals, getting mad at them because they won't fit in with some delightful picture which we've painted.

Elsie Robinson

All our lives we've cherished that picture, priding ourselves on its perfection. Then along comes a new friend, or a new wife or husband, and at once we decide that they are Our Dream Come True. And for a while such seems to be the case. Then gradually we realize that we have made a mistake. Why, they're not what we thought they were at all!

* * *

SO we feel ourselves cheated and become indignant and consumed with self pity. How can they fail us so when we've trusted them to live up to our ideals! How dreadful—how ungrateful of them to act like that when we had put them on a pedestal. What coarse creatures they are not to have appreciated our beautiful pedestal! All we asked of them was to be perfect and let us worship them. And instead, they insist on showing their own unworthy natures—thereby outraging our feelings and betraying our trust. So we wail and whereze—NEVER REALIZING OUR OWN FOLLY AND UNFAIRNESS.

We are very proud of ourselves because we put people on pedestals and indulge in romantic ideals, but there is really little beauty or sense in such an attitude.

* * *

We don't erect pedestals because we're wise and noble—we erect them because we're lazy and cowardly. It isn't hard to invent romantic ideals. It is a most pleasant form of fantasy in which all adolescents indulge, and through which they find escape from unpleasant reality. It is very hard and painful to face reality and accept life as it is and people as they are.

* * *

SO, to escape such difficulty, we make pedestals—AND PUT OUR BEST BELOVEDS ON THE DOG-HOUSE IF THEY WON'T STAY ON 'EM.

We have no more right to park people on pedestals than we have to cram them into straitjackets. And they do not wrong us, but prove their own unworthiness, if they refuse to stay parked or crammed. People have a right to be themselves. That is their supreme right and their first duty.

* * *

And we have no right to interfere with such expression in order to gratify our own sentimentality or bossiness. IT IS BETTER TO BE A FIFTH RATE HONEST EXPRESSION OF YOUR OWN SELF THAN A FIRST RATE COPY OF ANYONE ELSE'S IDEAL.

H. G. Wells Writes on

"The Science of Life"

In Collaboration With Prof. Julian Huxley and G. P. Wells

WE have already spoken of the extraordinary transformation that overtakes the young sea-squirt.

Here the sedentary adult animal, bearing only faintest indications of its real relationship, passes its early life in a tadpole-like form which shows all the salient points of the chordate plan, the notochord, tubular nervous system along the back, and the gill-slits.

H. G. Wells

If the gelatinous sea-squirt is not a degenerate chordate, why should its larval form be an entirely chordate? What creative idea is served by this hesitation in its development?

A much less all-pervading example, but none the less a very pretty one, we have already cited in the early horse-stock.

The three-toed Merychippus had an elaborate grinding pattern on its permanent premolar teeth; but the pattern of the milk-teeth was simpler, like the pattern of the permanent teeth in geologically earlier and more primitive horse-ancestors.

Here we can actually put side by side the adult ancestral form and its young descendant recapitulating it before passing on to the more highly evolved structure.

A beautiful example of recapitulation comes in the life-history of the common feather-star. This is an echinoderm belonging to the crinoid class.

The great majority of the class spend their adult lives rooted to the bottom; they are the stalked sea-lilies which wave their graceful, branching arms far down in the abyss, and in the past they were so abundant as to have built up whole layers of rock with their skeletons.

From such forms as these the freely - swimming feather - stars have evolved. But the feather-star, too, begins its adult existence with a fixed stage. For some weeks it lives and grows rooted to the bottom like a sea-lily. Only later does it abandon this sea-lily guise, break off from its stalk, which is left to die, and become a free-creeping feather-star.

An interesting case among plants of the preservation of phases of the ancestral life cycle which are now necessary, is that of the maidenhair tree or gingko. This lovely tree, with its leaves like little fans, is extinct in the wild state, but has been preserved to us by being cultivated as a sacred tree in the gardens of Chinese temples.

It is a naked-seeded plant, related to the pines and firs. As in all other seed-plants, its fertilization is effected by means of pollen.

The pollen-grain, as we have already explained in Book Two, if it alight on the pistil of a female flower, sends down a long tube toward the egg-cell embedded in the ovary.

From its original single nucleus are produced by division; two of these nuclei act as male gametes, either of them capable of fertilizing the egg.

In almost all seed plants these male gametes are merely more or less ordinary nuclei which pass down the tube to the ovum; but in the gingko and the cycads the nuclei, associating themselves with some of the surrounding protoplasm, become transformed into two actively swimming, ciliated sperms, like the sperms of a fern moss or a seaweed, which swim on within the tube to fertilize the egg.

They show that once upon a time, a very remote time, the ancestors of seed plants lived in the water, where free-swimming sperms provide the natural method of achieving fertilization.

And here, long after the pollen tube has been evolved to provide a dry method of fertilization for dry land plants, the motile character of these transitory sperms survive to recall the watery past.

Even in some much more modern plants, like the sunflower, though cilia are no longer formed, the fertilizing male nuclei still assume corkscrew shapes in recapitulation of the many lower plants.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 14—Diary of a modern Pepys: Awake before daylight and out with my wife to walk through the glistening dew of the park, the earliest up since days on the farm. And on Columbus ave. two tipsy girls in a taxi called to me: "Good morning, old high pocket!" at which my spouse laughed uproariously.

Passing the Hotel Hargrave, where we first lived in New York, we stopped for breakfast but felt perfect strangers, there being not a familiar face. And I wondered if others are touched by a melancholy in visiting old scenes, it being so disturbing I have not visited my home town in 20 years.

HOME to labor and came Eva Steinmetz and Otis Ralston and later to the Chatham to Charles and Kathleen Norris and an outpouring of the literati there. Then on to a play, an expensive production that was booed and hissed, and so affected me I slept fitfully through the night.

My moments at the radio recitals have furnished nothing memorable, but there is an exception, which offers hope. A pugilist at the Garden was knocking his opponent goofy and finally put over a haymaker to the chin, rushing to the microphone the victor gurgled: "I'll be right home, mama dear."

* * *

A prosperous Wall Street is reflected in generous tipping and vice versa. Doormen, waiters, hat checkers and others whose incomes consist largely of tips have found gratuities cut in half since the market bust.

* * *

A GO-GETTER hat checker—he has often garnered $100 a week with his concession in a speakeasy—tells me of a trick to bring customers back, especially in the winter. Where overcoats are tailor-made, the name of the owner is inside the pocket. He peeks at names, memorizes them and when an owner departs calls out cheerfully: "Come again, Mr. Soandso." And the old soandso does.

* * *

A number of wealthy men refuse to tip coat room attendants. Among the hold-outs are a theatrical magnate, a bank president, a famous inventor, an ex-judge of a supreme court and, O yes, almost forgot—One-Eye Connolly.

* * *

Frank Case, proprietor of the Algonquin, was the first hotel man to display a coat room sign: "Please do not tip attendants." He was also first to abolish the bar in his hotel, long before prohibition. It is noticed, too, that despite the newer hotels about him, his continues to prosper.

* * *

WHILE motoring upstate, Harry Hirshfield inquired of an old gentleman along the highway if he might take a certain road to Albany. "Yes," was the reply, "but bring it back. We had a heck of a time getting it."

* * *

What many consider the most finished dramatic review of the season was dashed off in 20 minutes to catch an edition. And there is no good reason for not hurling out the lines of Gilbert Gabriel as the critic who did it and "Green Pastures" the name of the show he reviewed.

Personal nomination for the most obliging sales clerk in town—Dave Levy at Nat Lewis' on Broadway.

THERE are few newcomers to N. New York who do not spend the first year wondering why they came and end the year wondering why they didn't come sooner. Nobody comes to the metropolis, however, without head waggers warning them they are making a grave mistake. And sometimes they are right.

"Biographies," writes Tim B. of Dallas, "are now being written about everybody. Maybe they will soon begin to write biographical columnists. Indeed, cheer up, they may even get around to you."

Bruce Barton is all ready writing about us. The title is: "The Man Nobody Reads."

Rhyming Optimist

By Aline Michaelis

By ALINE MICHAELIS

A ROOM I choose that opens to the east
Because, when night is gone,
From sombre bonds of shadows late released,
I need the dawn.

I need the quickening tides of light that lift
Above night's shades forlorn,
When all the doubts and darkness adrift,
Are merged in morn.

A room I seek that opens to the east
And as old Earth spins on
My grateful eyes again with gladness feast
Upon the dawn.

When up the budding sky rise floods of light
To exercise night's spell,
For me anew the world is set aright
And all is well.
